Daily Bulletin

SATURDAY, OCT. 12, 1889.

It is reported that the Road Supervisor of Honolulu is paying for services under him with bank checks. Where did the deposit thus drawn upon come from? Why was it not paid into the treasury according to law? What law authorizes the Road Supervisor to disburse public money? These are queries that require answering.

THE HAMAKUA POLICE CASE.

We have received two letters on the matter of the late Chinese policeman at Honokaa. One of them is addressed to the Marshal, the other to this paper. Both go into the character of the policeman and doings in which he was involved, and their writers vindicate themselves against Deputy Sheriff Lyman's insinuations of improper motives for their previous anonymous letters. Neither of the correspondents, however, deal with the main point at first raised by them, and to which the Deputy Sheriff's denial was particularly directed. Namely, that this Chinaman, after conviction of unlawfully dealing in opium, was retained in his office of policeman. We regard the other questions raised as scarcely important enough for public consideration, and do not see the necessity of the Marshal's correspondent divulging his authorship of one of the published letters. The retention of the policeman after conviction of crime was what moved us to take notice of the communications, and the Deputy Sheriff must be allowed the full benefit of his denial in that regard until he is contradicted with evidence. It must be said, however, that the original appointment of this Chinaman, if his character was generally notorious at the time, was very blameworthy.

BATTALION DRILL.

Thursday evening the Honolulu Rifles to the number of 120 or more, after assembling at their armory, marched to the Makiki recreation grounds for the purpose of battalion drill. It was a beautiful moonlight night and quite a large number of spectators were present. The men from the American war vessels did not participate. The battalion was in command of Major H. F. Hebbard, Col. V. V. Ashford was the reviewing officer. The drill was a great success, the men executing the various movements with much precision. The drill was one of the best had in a long time. Shortly after half-past nine o'clock the battalion marched back to the Armory, where the men partook of coffee, ice cream and cake, lemonade and ginger ale. Mr. F. Horn was the caterer. It need hardly be said that full justice was done the refreshments.

Col. Ashford, Major Hebbard, the staff in line and non-commissioned officers assembled in Company B's room where, after the good things had been disposed of, several toasts were proposed and responded to. The health of Col. Ashford was drunk in an enthusiastic manner. Major Hebbard responded to the "Honolulu Rifles," Dr. N. B. Emerson and C. K. Wilder to "Non-Commissioned Officers," and Wray Taylor of the Bulletin to the "Press." Capt. McCarthy and Lieut. Reist offered some suggestions. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by all present, the company singing "Auld Lang Syne" before parting.

HILO NEWS.

The Hilo Record of the 8th inst. has a long article on the "Hilo Railroad." It gives a glowing description of the resources that would be developed by that work.

The same paper says there is a desire among the Portuguese to invest in the homestead lots on Kaiwili, and, if either the Hilo Sugar Co. or the Onomea Sugar Co. put a flume on the land to connect with either of these plantations, there will be a number of families raising cane on the homesteads referred to. At Bouganville the temperature is from 56 to 58 these mornings. A meeting of voters for Nobles was to be held at the courthouse on the 10th for the choice of a central committee.

The gang of prisoners arrived from Hilo were sent to work on the Waiolama canal until a prison is built for them at Olan on the Volcano road.

Mr. Henry Deacon is to be congratulated on his appointment as manager of the Pepeekeo plantation, of which a two-thirds interest was lately bought by Mr. Young. The Record says "he will have a hard row to hoe for a while, as the Japs there are a lazy, shiftless set."

The previous Sunday was a real Hilo rainy day, but fine weather prevailed the two following days.

New Free Tontine Policy

Equitable Life Assurance Society

OF THE UNITED STATES

A SIMPLE PROMISE TO PAY.

[From the NEW YORK TIMES, June 22, 1889.]

The Equitable Life Assurance Society has adopted a new form of policy which, like a bank draft, is a simple promise to pay without conditions on the back.

[From the CHICAGO INVESTIGATOR.]

Always on the alert, and ever anxious to give the public the most advantageous contract in life insurance, the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York has, in the past, made many advances on old methods and has been the means to liberalize life insurance in a greater degree perhaps, than any other organization. It is not at all surprising, therefore, that this great company now comes before the people with a new contract, the like of which has not before been known in life insurance.

[From the KENTUCKY REGISTER, Richmond, Ky., June 28, 1887.]

The Equitable Life Assurance Society has, in the past, done more to create and maintain confidence in life insurance than any other company. Consequently its business is larger than that of any of its competitors. Furthermore, it has now taken a step which practically sweeps every objection of the character referred to out of the way. The result, undoubtedly, will be that thousands of men who have heretofore lacked confidence in life insurance, will examine the new policy offered by the Equitable, and assure their lives forthwith.

[From the BOSTON POST.]

This company has done more than any other to simplify the assurance contract, and to maintain public confidence in life insurance.

[From the PACIFIC UNDERWRITER, San Francisco, July 1, 1889.]

The Equitable has already established a world-wide reputation for liberal dealings with its policy-holders and for its prompt settlement of all legitimate claims against it, and this new policy cannot fail to enhance its reputation for enterprise and progressiveness in dealing with the subject of life insurance.

OCTOBER TERM.

Trial of AIB et Loomens for Treason. Friday, October 11th. AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Court resumed at 1 o'clock P. M. Mr. Rosa said the defense rested. The Attorney-General called Col. R. H. Baker in rebuttal. He was examined as follows: I am an officer on the King's staff, have been a colonel on the staff nearly five months. I know E. W. Wilcox. I was in court and heard him testify about my bringing messages to him from the king. I first took a message from Wilcox to the king on the morning of the outbreak. I had not carried messages previous to that from the king to Wilcox. I did not deliver any message to Wilcox at his office from the king on political matters, or about the Rifle Association. Wilcox and I went to see the king to ask if he would be an honorary member of the Rifle Association. I will remember that he refused. The king said if they wanted him to do anything they must wait until they had a shooting match and he would give a prize. No further talk between them, nothing said about the proposed project. I did not take a message on the 29th from the king to Wilcox. Did not see Wilcox the day before the outbreak.

Cross-examined by Mr. Rosa - I am librarian for the palace. The library is next to the Chamberlain's office. Do not exactly know how many volumes there are. It is a fact I have no occupation. I am being supported by His Majesty. The message I received from Wilcox to take to the king. His men had come to my house for me. The message was to tell the king to come in the palace that morning. I delivered the message. The king sent a message to Kahalewai and one to Robt. Parker, for the former to hold the barracks and not let anyone have arms or ammunition. I took no other messages, only those two. Took no message about the tabu of the palace. I do not remember going with Wilcox around the palace some days previous to the 30th. The order to Kahalewai was taken by me before Wilcox had been to the barracks. I do not know where the King was that night. I used to meet Wilcox now and then previous to the 29th. I think the reason that Wilcox got me to take the message was because I was a staff officer. Some evenings Wilcox came down to see me. I do not recollect we talked about the rights of the King. I was turned out of office by the new constitution. Have had no employment since. Wilcox had a civil engineer's office. I did not call on him often. I never advised Wilcox and Pahia that I was the proper person to show them where the cannon and ammunition were. The Attorney-General approached me yesterday evening, and asked me to go into his office. Wilcox had confidence enough in me to get me to take a message to the King.

This concluded the evidence in the case. At 1:40 Mr. Rosa commenced his address to the jury. He said he thought the jury could find no fault in his conduct of the case. He had been as brief as possible with the exception of the cross-examination of the two principal witnesses Boyd and Maakham. The defendant took no part in the meetings. That he was guilty of conspiracy he admitted, but as to being guilty of treason he denied it. The Palace was the King's home. The entering of it by them men could not be called an invasion as the King assented. When the denial of such by the King came out, people around town said, "it is a lie." It was the best thing for the country that this thing had come out and it would teach the King to do different. (This last remark was received with applause which the Court at once suppressed). He did not believe one word of the evidence that he was evidently trying to shield the one who sheltered and fed him. He submitted on the evidence that there was nothing to show that the defendant was guilty of treason.

Mr. Hatch commenced the address to the jury on behalf of the Crown at 2:15 o'clock. After reviewing certain portions of the evidence he went on to say that the defendant not only was present at the meetings where there arms were collected, but he marched with the column and was with them when they held up the police. The police are some part of the government, and that was an act of war in the definition of the penal code.

CHARGE TO THE JURY.

At 2:40 o'clock His Honor the Chief Justice commenced his charge to the jury. It was as follows: Gentlemen of the Jury: - I shall have to ask your careful attention for a few minutes for a brief exposition of what I regard to be the law which will govern you in your consideration of this case. Let me remind you that you are now exercising one of the most, if not the most important duty that a private citizen is called upon to exercise in behalf of the country where he may reside, and it makes no difference whether you are natural citizens of this country, or whether you are still owing allegiance to your own country. As long as you are here pursuing your pleasure or your private interests, it will be your duty to assist the Court if you are called upon to act as Jurors in the trial of cases that may be brought before you. I have no doubt that you realize the importance of the occasion. This is an important trial, for it is the first time that a foreigner by birth has been tried on the charge of treason, an offense which is recognized in our code as the first offense in importance and place, an offense which is recognized to be the most obnoxious of all crimes, a most detestable crime, because it destroys the security of life, property, and what is dearer to all patriotic citizens, the existence of the government itself.

The chapter on treason has not been read to you, and I propose to read it to you, or nearly all of it. "Treason is hereby defined to be any plotting or attempt to dethrone or destroy the King, or the levying of war against the King's government, or the adhering to the enemies thereof, giving them aid and comfort, the same being done by a person owing allegiance to this kingdom." "Allegiance is the obedience and fidelity due to the kingdom from those under its protection." "An alien, whether his native country be at war or at peace with this kingdom, owes allegiance to this kingdom during his residence therein, and during such residence is capable of committing treason against this kingdom." "I may say that allegiance is of two characters, natural and local. Natural allegiance is that which a citizen owes to his own country, and local allegiance is that which is due from every person residing in it to uphold and obey the law, except ambassadors and ministers of foreign states. They are not amenable to the laws of the country. It is not, however, been shown to you that this defendant is within that exception. I charge you, therefore, that so far as allegiance is concerned, being a resident here he owed allegiance and fidelity to the kingdom. I will go on with the fifth section, which reads as follows: "To constitute the levying of war contemplated in the first section of this chapter, it shall be requisite that the persons concerned therein be parties to some overt act (that is an open act), in or towards procuring, preparing or using force, or putting themselves in a condition of readiness to use force, either by being present at such overt act, or by promoting, aiding in or being otherwise accessory before the fact to the same."

Sixth section. "In order to constitute the levying of war, the force must be employed or intended to be employed for the dethroning or destruction of the King or in contravention of the laws, or in opposition to the authority of the King's government, with an intent or for an object affecting some of the branches or departments of said government generally, or affecting the enactment, repeal or enforcement of laws in general, or of some general law, or affecting the people or the public tranquility generally; in distinction from some special intent or object, affecting individuals other than the King, or a particular district."

I think perhaps to have you understand it better I might say that formerly in England, when most of our law is derived, high treason was only compassing the death of the Sovereign, and by various constructions of the law when a man committed an act, though not directly aimed at the person of the Sovereign but which would endanger him politically, the courts held that it might result in the destruction of his political life and that was considered equivalent to compassing the death of the Sovereign, and finally the law has been amended by statutes from time to time; the law now existing in regard to treason is that the act may be either to dethrone or destroy the king personally or levy war against the King's government.

Now, a good deal has been made to-day of the expression, "against the King's government," and I say that the law would be just the same should the act be against the government of the Hawaiian Islands, or in fact against the government, without saying the King's government. There is nothing in the argument of counsel that as the constitution of 1854 said that the government was the King's and that the constitution of 1887 does not say that the government is the King's therefore the statute of "Treason" is of no effect, and I would like to explain to you how that difference arose. I find it in a very old book, containing the constitution of 1849, where, as the government of those early days was reducing its principles to writing, there being large numbers then of powerful chiefs that had large numbers of retainers under them, they defined their respective rights - there was a little history given - I am reading on page eleven of the so-called "Blue Book." The origin of the Kingdom was this. It was Kanehahala 1st and to him belonged all the land from one end of the islands to the other, though it was not his own private property" and then it goes on to describe what the prerogatives of the King were. "He is the Sovereign of all the people and all the chiefs," and further, "The kingdom is his, he shall have the direction of the army and all the implements of war of the kingdom. He shall also have the direction of the government property" and so on. It made him the head of the State, and that phraseology was continued in all the constitutions up to that of 1887. I presume that those who drafted the change in the constitution of 1887 were feeling that it was misunderstood and misconstrued by many and so they made a change. There is a law that there shall be levied or paid to the King or to his Majesty, a certain stamp tax, and that was claimed by some persons not versed in the law, that that was the personal prerogative of the King, whereas it was intended that that stamp duty should go to the King's treasury - the public treasury.

Now when a British vessel of war is called "Her Majesty's ship," it does not mean that it is Queen Victoria's private property, that she has a right to sell any ship of war and take the proceeds and buy new dresses. This seems perhaps foolish talk to you, gentlemen, but I think perhaps it is necessary that you may understand that when the expression is used, "against the King's government," it means the Hawaiian Government.

Now, what is the Government? It is difficult to define properly what a government is, but I have one definition that I think expresses it, "that part of society which attends to the business of the whole, it is the ruling power, the executive Government is necessary, for if it were not for the government, every man would follow his own aims, society would consist of individuals each one pursuing his own aims and ends. Now when the business of the whole is delegated to a certain number of persons, or an uncertain number of persons, then they constitute the government. It might be vested in various departments and might be very much subdivided and the authority distributed, but wherever we find the power lodged, that is the government. It is not strictly correct to say that the government consists merely of four gentlemen who are Cabinet Ministers, for there are other branches of the government. They are the executive, however, - they are the principal executive officers of the government.

Now to explain what I mean here by a simple illustration: Take a human being; he has a soul in him; by cutting off an arm or a leg you do not lessen his spiritual nature, or his soul and mind at all. You may dismember him, cut off both arms and both legs, he would still have existence. So, with the Ministers, if one half the Ministers should be killed, that would not lessen the government one half, or if one quarter of them were killed, it would not lessen the government one quarter, the government would still exist; so, if all the Ministers would be swept away, the government would still exist, it would be somewhat disorganized, but society would not break up in consequence, and the government would exist. I say, in order that you may understand it, that there may be treason charged though it does not have for its object the dethroning or destruction of the King, and I charge you that it is the law of this country that an overt act in procuring, preparing or using force, or putting themselves in a condition of readiness to use force, in order to effect the repeal of the general law or to act in opposition to the authority of the King's government, would be an act of treason.

Now, it has been well said by counsel who addressed you in behalf of the King in this case, which is styled "the King against Loomens," that that does not mean the King personally, it is the King as the representative of the state. In a republican form of government, individuals are in the name of the people of the United States of America, the people of the State of New York, or the people of the State of California; in England it is the Queen against so and so, and in this government, which is a constitutional monarchy and a limited monarchy, the title is "the King" against whoever is arraigned for an offense against the law.

The facts shown by the prosecution are not seriously denied. There are I believe some facts with reference to the particular acts of the defendant which are not admitted, which are contested by the other side, but the general facts in reference to the affairs that commenced on July 10th, or earlier, are undenied on the morning of the 30th of July are not denied by the defense. They put on the stand as their witness the man who says he was the chief one in moving and carrying out this scheme. Mr. Wilcox himself does not deny the essential facts which were attempted to be proved by the government when they put on their part of the case, so I say, gentlemen, that the essential facts of the case are not seriously denied by the defense, but they have put in the case as evidence and they contend that it is proved that these facts do not constitute treason, because they were done with the knowledge and consent of His Majesty the King. It is a matter of very great regret to us all that such statements should come out in the case, but I deemed that it was proper to admit them, so much having come out in the evidence and there being so many facts that might lead a jury to suppose that that was the case, it was better to have the full facts come out.

Whether they are true or not is for you to say, and gentlemen, my opinion and the law is this, that even if you should come to the conclusion that His Majesty was a party to this affair and did acquiesce in the use of an armed force to some up to the Palace and to take possession of the Palace grounds, which is government property, and of the government building here, which is government property, and he had promised these people that he would come there at their call and sign a new constitution, it is nevertheless treason even if you believe those facts to be true.

Suppose for instance the King (which God forbid may ever happen) should be accessory in so serious a crime as murder (I merely put it as an illustration), the man who was a co-murderer with him would be held guilty under the law. The fact that the King was also guilty would not acquit him; the King could not be punished for it, but the co-murderer could. So more then, if the jury should find that His Majesty was a party to this treason against the government, should it have any effect in making you decide by your verdict that the prisoner at the bar here is not guilty of treason.

As has been stated, the King cannot abrogate any law, he cannot pardon without the consent of the Privy Council, he cannot pardon in advance or abrogate any law; that must be done by the Legislature and that must be done in the regular way. The King cannot, except as a coup d'etat, abrogate a constitution and give a new constitution. I think it is proper for me to say as there has been some allusion to it here and there have been a great many allusions to it in some parts of the native press, that the constitution of 1887 only became a de jure constitution by general acquiescence. It was the de facto constitution because the King executed it on the advice of his Ministers and it became a de jure constitution because all the officers of the government swore to it, and all those who voted at the elections swore to support it, and it thus became the general law of the land.

However, an unsuccessful rebellion and an unsuccessful revolution are always treason. I think that is self-evident. It is admitted by Mr. Wilcox in his evidence that he had prepared a new constitution which he carried there to the palace accompanied by an armed force, and he says that it was his desire to enforce it, but it is a historical fact that this new constitution was not proclaimed; it is not in force, the constitution of 1887 was not abrogated. It is an historical fact that the attempt was unsuccessful. If you believe the testimony of those men that they marched upon the palace with an armed force and took possession of the palace premises, and took possession of the Government building with the intent of securing the repeal or abrogation of a fundamental law of this kingdom, the constitution of 1887, there is no escape from finding a verdict of guilty. Should you find that this man was one of those engaged in this business, there is no escape from rendering a verdict of guilty under the indictment.

If you believe his own statement that he was present at the meetings whose object he knew was to turn out the Ministers, to expel them by getting a new constitution (the constitution now in force does not authorize the King to dismiss summarily his cabinet) and that he knew that arms were procured to carry that intent into effect and that he marched with that body of men, armed, and was within the Palace grounds consulting with the leader, talking with the leader, not remonstrating with him, and that he endeavored to get supplies to them at their request, if you believe these acts are proved by the testimony of two witnesses, there is no escape from finding him guilty.

I shall read you a little more of the law of treason: Section seven of the act reads: "An accessory before the fact to treason is guilty of treason and shall be subject to prosecution, trial and punishment therefore, though the principals more directly concerned have not been convicted or are not amenable to justice." If the principals have not been convicted, the law of this country, and it is the law all round the globe, all accessories before the fact of treason are guilty of treason and are subject to trial and punishment therefore, although the principals have not been convicted, and it says further, in the interests of fairness and of liberty, that "no person shall be convicted of treason but by the testimony of two or more lawful witnesses to the same overt act of treason whereof he stands charged, unless he shall in open court confess such treason." There is also a section of the law prescribing the punishment. It is also punishable for a person having a knowledge of treason and does not divulge the same to the governor of the island. There are no governors at present, so I suppose that part of the law is inoperative.

Gentlemen, this is a serious occasion. The Court is well aware of it and trusts you have listened patiently to all the evidence in the case, and that you will give your serious attention and the consideration which it deserves. I have endeavored to show you the law as I find it to be. You must take the law from the Court. If I am wrong, there is a tribunal that will set me right, but the plain meaning of the law of treason is as I have stated it. I read from a United States case: "To march in arms with a force marshaled and arrayed, consulting acts of violence and devastation in order to compel the resignation of a public officer, and thereby render ineffective an act of congress is high treason." 2 Dallas 216. The mere doing of such an act as tearing down a pound or attacking a private residence would be a mere act of riot; it would not be treason; such an act would not be against the government. It must be against a branch of the government or for the repeal of a law, against the community at large or the government to be treason. A disturbance against the manager of a plantation would not be treason, although it might be an unlawful assemblage and be a very bloody riot. Assaults and batteries might be committed and yet not be treason. There must be an intent to effect some public purpose, or the force to be used against the government or some branch of the government. If you find that the testimony would warrant you in returning such a verdict, gentlemen, it would be your duty to render such a verdict, and the responsibility of the law and the responsibility of the sentence or whether it shall be commuted in any way is not with you. You are not law makers, you are not law givers, you are merely Jurors whose province it is to find whether the facts which I have endeavored to show you are essential to be proved in this case have been proved against the defendant at the bar beyond a reasonable doubt. Understand what that means; a reasonable doubt is a doubt for which you may be able to give a substantial reason and which is not a fanciful doubt, and if you have any reasonable doubts that this man was engaged in these acts which I have stated to be treason, you will give him the benefit of them. You will not raise imaginary doubts; they must be doubts arising from the testimony. You understand, gentlemen, that nine of you arriving at a verdict, that will be a lawful verdict. You will choose a foreman who will sign the verdict. You may retire for deliberation.

THE VERDICT. At 3:10 the jury retired to consider their verdict. Twenty minutes later they sent a note to His Honor asking for instructions. At 3:35 they came into Court and returned a unanimous verdict of guilty, with a recommendation to executive clemency. Mr. Rosa noted exceptions to the verdict. The prisoner showed a keen realization of his position, weeping bitterly on hearing the verdict. He was removed to the Station house. At 3:40 the Court adjourned till 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

LOCAL & GENERAL NEWS. It is reported that the natives are subscribing money towards the defense of Wilcox for treason. A WARRANT is out for the arrest of John E. Bush on a charge of criminal libel preferred against him by W. C. Aoki, the lawyer. A CONSUMER'S jury found a verdict of death by his own hand in the case of the Chinaman who shot himself at Kahalaui. His countryman whom he first attacked was wounded but not seriously. The complimentary band concert at the Hotel last evening to Hon. J. L. Stevens, U. S. Minister Resident, and family, was a very enjoyable affair. Quite a large number of prominent citizens were on the grounds while the grounds were crowded with listeners. The band played magnificently and had to repeat some of the numbers. The front of the building was illuminated with colored lanterns.

Dr. Miner yesterday afternoon held an autopsy on the body of Hildred Hutchison, the little girl who died at the Catholic Sisters' school as previously reported. Coroner Chas. Creighton empaneled the following jury to hold an inquest: M. Davis, E. Sachs, M. D. Monarrat, F. Gertz, E. G. Schuman and D. Logan. They viewed the body and were sworn at the mother's house, Makiki, and on returning to the Station adjourned till Tuesday at 2 o'clock.

A SPECIAL meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Queen's Hospital was held this morning. Action on the proposed amendment to the by-laws was deferred to the regular meeting in December. The Trustees having had in view the engaging of a trained nurse for the Hospital, instructed the Executive Committee to make arrangements with Mrs. Johnstone, who has had great experience in the Florence Nightingale Training School & Lyonic Hospitals. This will be a great boon to the institution.

EVENTS THIS EVENING. Band concert at Emma Square, at 4:30. Chiarini's Italian Circus on the Esplanade, at 8 o'clock. PUBLIC CONCERT. The Royal Hawaiian Band will give a public concert this afternoon at Emma Square, commencing at 4:30 o'clock. Following is the programme: March - Gipsy Barou... Strauss Overture - Romantico... Beda Polka - Stephanie... Fährbach selection - Barber of Seville... Rossini Cavatina - Bart... Verdi Waltz - Artist Life... Strauss
