TUESDAY, AUG. 23, 1887.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

He is a narrow-minded man who refuses liberty of thought to his fellow man, or marks him as an enemy because his opinion is not "in accord." This narrow-mindedness is rather characteristic of this insular community. Five and five make ten. This is a demonstrable truth, which admits of no controversy, and no doubt. Therefore it is a conclusion concerning which there can be but one opinion. Not so with every simple matter which comes up in everyday life. There are so many questions that confront us perpetually which cannot be mathematically settled, and respecting which it cannot be said positively that this or that is the exact and certain truth. How then are such matters to be regarded? Simply as matters of opinion, and one intelligent man who has thought out a subject and carefully examined it by the best light which he can reflect on it, has as much right to his view as his neighbor, who under similar circumstances has reached a different conclusion. The justness of this principle is recognised by enlightened and liberal men, and it regulates their intercourse with their fellow men. We regret that it is our extreme misfortune to meet almost daily men who do not come up to this standard. Their minds are as narrow as a mosquito between the eyes. They cling to their contracted ideas with the tenacity of a leech, and do not admit the right of others to their own opinions. A man who does not see eye to eye with them is in criminal darkness. If his political views are not in exact harmony with theirs, and he differs from them in some little particular, he is a kicker, a malcontent, a scallawag, a dangerous person, and an enemy to good government. He may be the most honorable and upright of men, utterly incapable of a mean act or a dirty deed, while they themselves would sell their grandfather, rob a church, or resort to the most contemptible trickery and duplicity to get a government billet, and yet because his mind is not so narrow as theirs they vilify him with their scandalous tongues. We are tired of these people. They are a dreadful strain on our patience. Their small-bear clatter is like the voice of demons in our ears. We feel a generous impulse to apply a charge of dynamite to their skulls, with the view of enlarging their minds and expanding their souls.

OFF THE TRACK AGAIN.

This morning's "Gazette" tells a pretty little tale under the heading of "Espionage," and states that "possibly this is the very case that suggested the Bulletin's charge," referring to an article which appeared in this paper yesterday under the same heading. Our contemporary is off the track again. We referred to no particular case, and never heard of the one related by the "Gazette." Moreover, we have no knowledge whatever of any parallel case. The "Gazette" would better maintain its dignity by avoiding such false and malicious insinuations.

HAWAIIAN COTTON.

"Are you a judge of cotton?" said Col. Norris, placing a bunch of the raw material in front of a reporter this morning. "You are? Well, that is fine cotton. It was grown here by me, from the Tahitian seed, and is worth 90 cents a pound. This is a fine cotton country, and the cultivation of it could be made profitable." The Colonel's estimate of the quality of the sample produced is undoubtedly correct. It has been examined at this office by an expert in cotton, and he pronounces it a first class article. This in addition to the testimony of the Colonel, who is himself an authority.

A giving hand, though foul, shall have fair praise.

THE COMING ELECTION.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—The Reform Party has nominated its tickets and published its platform. The Hawaiians have held their meetings, and delegates from the various wards have approved their ticket for the coming election. The issue is now fairly joined. The election returns will show how

"The weapon that comes down as still As snowflakes fall upon the sod, Will execute the freemen's will As lightning does the will of God."

No one has yet gained such mastery over the forces of nature as to disprove the old adage, "There's no telling where the lightning will strike." Some of our aspiring candidates for political honors have already had their hopes blighted by failing to secure the approval of the Nominating Convention.

An estimate of the probable voting population of the city will show what elements of uncertainty there are in the very constitution of our political community. The census of 1884 reported, in Honolulu, 4,693 native males. One-third of these, 1,560 are under 20 years of age, leaving probably 3,000 native Hawaiian voters. Yet only 2,200 votes were polled at the last election, 1,300 for the Palace party. There were two years ago 309 Portuguese males, and as their present number is at least one-third more than when the census was taken, the Portuguese vote may be reckoned about 300. Other foreigners, not including Asiatics or Polyynesians, then numbered 1,850 males. Deducting one-fifth as under the voting age, or otherwise disqualified, we have a total of 1,500. The number actually enrolled on the Register's books has not yet been ascertained. The grand total of the voting population of Honolulu, under the new Constitution, on the basis above stated, would be 4,900, making 2,500 votes necessary to secure a majority, if every one qualified to vote should do so. Will more than 2,200 Hawaiians vote?

The Reform Party, organizing their convention on the basis of one delegate for every 25 members belonging to the Reform Clubs, and having 100 delegates, would appear to have 2,500 voters in their party organization, apparently about the requisite number to secure a majority at the election. But it is evident that there must be no premature shouting of victory. The figures show a close division of the voting population, similar to that existing at the present time in the United States on the liquor question in politics, prohibitionists and saloonmen having now about the same numerical strength.

Assuming that the Hawaiians, as represented in the Kaunakapili meeting, will naturally vote for their own nominees, it is evident that the Reform party has no easy task, in the few days remaining before September 12, to do such thorough and faithful work with every individual voter, as to assure the election of their candidates beyond a peradventure. The numerical proportion of the Portuguese, 300 out of 4,900, might show that their is some foundation for their reported disappointment that out of the 13 candidates on the ticket of the Reform party, not one is taken from their nationality. But it is hopeless for them to think of electing one of their number on any ticket of their own. Nor are they yet under such strict priestly or partisan control, that they can be pledged to cast their vote solid for one ticket or the other.

The chief element of uncertainty in the independent vote. So close is the election likely to be, under the most favorable showing for the Reform party, that it behooved the nominating conventions to be very discriminating in their selection of candidates. Supposed availability with certain classes, the firemen or the military, the merchants or the mechanics, is a false test of a candidate's fitness. The average moral standard of the community is a truer test of political availability.

To be righteous over much, tithing mint, anise and cummin, forgetting the weightier matters of justice, love and truth is sure political death. To fall below the average moral standard of the community, is to make doubtful the success of a party with such standard-bearers. Much will be borne by a political party in the way of moral delinquency; but there is a point, where the strain results in a break. Some one or more on the opposing ticket may receive enough votes to make sure of a careful scouting by the party managers, lest opportunity be given for evoking too strong an opposition within the party.

Both in the men it selects for representatives, and the measures it chooses to secure its ends, the Reform party is now on trial. In asking its adherents to give their votes to the ticket it nominates, it virtually pledges itself to make the best nominations to secure the objects laid down in the party platform. If it fails in its selection of men, or its choice of measures; if its ticket has objectionable elements, it fails to command that moral support which is the true condition of political success. No hundred men could overawe, or terrorize this community; but a dozen men, voicing the moral sentiment of the community have a moral power that will triumph in a mass meeting, or at the polls.

Speaking of this moral element in the great political contests of the United States, a distinguished American politician has recently said, "In this community the condition of the achievement of all great objects is the existence of great parties. I am prouder of nothing than of my own connection with that party which seems to me to have done more for human liberty and for free popular institutions than any other party in the history of the world. But important as party is, there is one thing still more important, and that is a manly, reasonable, individual independence of party. It is those who always hold party subordinate to the private conscience and the independent judgment, who compel a party to keep its leaders true to public principle and the public welfare, who make its strength."

We commend these words to our new party leaders. We desire that results should show that the Reform Party has adopted such a platform and chosen such standard-bearers that our community will endorse both men and measures. If not let us hope the lesson will be learned too early, that it is not wise to decry healthy opposition to unsuitable candidates, or dishonorable actions. Necessity is the tyrant's or the coward's plea. Political schemers must take note of other qualifications than availability. Reform.

A TRIP ACROSS HAWAII.

On Thursday, the 11th instant, at 11 o'clock a. m. two friends of us started for a trip from Hilo to Kau and return. The fact that we had other business on hand did not hinder us from seeing sights and getting pleasure out of our trip. And while it is hardly the thing to flaunt our business travels in the face of the public, it is always considered proper to give an account of a pleasure trip. On the strength of the amount of pleasure which we got out of our journey, then, I am justified in writing an account of it.

Traveling over a variety of roads and through woods which themselves are a sight worth a stranger's trouble to see—where bananas grow untroubled by the wind and where the "bird's-nest" ferns reach their highest perfection—at the end of two hours' ride, we found ourselves at the Ramie Plantation. It seemed not a little wonderful to us that the steam engine and boiler for the cleaning machinery were taken out from Hilo on the same road which we had taken. The cleaning process was not going on, but the vigorous crop growing by the road side was evidence that the ramie industry will not fail here for want of suitable soil and climate. Leaving the Ramie Plantation we passed over a rocky road, in fact, an old lava flow, most of the way to Oloa or the "Halfway House." Here there are evidences of a prosperous little community. In the open ground are evidences that hogs thrive here, while a glance into the woods gives evidence of successful fruit growing. For some time before we reached Oloa the "ohelos" were to be found by the road side, but now they became more plentiful. What a pity it is that such places are not connected with the more populous centers with good roads. After leaving Oloa we went over hard lava road for eight or nine miles when the road led into a dense forest. Ferns reached across forming an arch high over our heads as we rode on horseback. Just inside of this forest is the seven mile post—seven miles from the Volcano House. This last seven miles is over a varied kind of road. Part of the way is over lava rock, part through koa groves, and the last mile on the Keolu turnpike. At 6:30 o'clock the Volcano House was reached.

The next morning we started on our journey, leaving the descent into the crater till our return. Reaching the high point on the brink of the crater, however, the everlasting fires came into view. Jets of lava could be seen spouting up to a considerable height. Passing on over the "sandy desert" a new operation in the process of world making presented itself to our view. How abundant rain and simple cryptogamous vegetation make soil out of lava, can be seen at and near Hilo. But to learn how wind and sun, with very little rain, performs the same work, one must pass over some such a place as that south and southwest of Kilauea. Going on over fields of "pahoehoe" and one flow of "aa" we soon reached the grazing lands of Kapsapa Ranch. Ten o'clock brought us to the Halfway House. "Halfway to what?" is a question still unanswered. Eleven found us at headquarters of Kapsapa Ranch, and half past twelve at Pahala. Taking lunch here, it was half past two when we arrived at Punahoa, where half an hour spent in host Lee's bath-house gave vigor for the remainder of the journey to Waiohinu. At Hontupao a real road was found. After passing over the neglected strips of unoccupied land, which by courtesy are called roads, about Pahala and all that part of Kau, a real road seemed like an old friend. The little town of Waiohinu, nestling in its beautiful green cove was reached at six o'clock.

Business over and the trip reversed we found ourselves at the Volcano House again Monday afternoon. Some of the "Dana party" were ready to start down into the crater, and we joined them. Two lakes are already formed, but the smoke interfered with a good view of the more southerly one. We sat on the bluff and looked down into the one to the west of old Halemaunna. Grandeur seemed materialized as we gazed into the abyss by daylight. But as darkness drew on the scene passed beyond the power of words, and we could only sit and look on and feel the utter powerlessness of language to describe the molten lake before us and the emotions which it inspired in our hearts. Those who have been watching developments for a few days past report that the lake—"Dana Lake," if you please—is rapidly increasing in size. Certain it is that there was a considerable crumbling away of the sides even while we sat looking at it. Both were we to leave the scene, though our dinner had been postponed until almost eight o'clock and we had a long hard climb before us. Though it was ten when we reached the house, weary and hungry, none regretted the trip.

The following day and an easy journey brought us back to Hilo, where we found a Honolulu party to go and test the truthfulness of our report of Kilauea.

Let me have a mild CIGAR

THE ABOVE REQUEST IS HEARD daily in cigar stores, saloons and other places where cigars are sold, for it is an undisputed fact that most smokers prefer a mild cigar and that those who have for a long time smoked strong cigars, principally imported Manilas, will, after having thoroughly injured the stomach and impaired the nervous system, surely want a mild cigar, if they could find the right kind.

How many thousands of smokers who suffer from loss of appetite, headache, nervous irritability, asthma, etc., and who have tried all possible remedies without success, might be cured if they knew that their sufferings were caused by the intemperate use of strong cigars, and that they should only smoke mild and properly prepared ones.

It is a fact that all mild cigars agree well with smokers, for in most cases there is a lack of care in the selection of the tobacco, and often the necessary experience for it is wanting, yet there is one brand which suits the most fastidious smoker, and that is

ENGELBRECHT'S "Sampler" Health Cigar

Which is made from mild, aromatic and particularly selected and prepared tobacco, and combines all the qualities which may be expected from a health cigar. It causes no bad effect of any kind, is agreeable to the taste, burns evenly to the end and possesses a fine aroma. No smoker should fail to give Engelbrecht's "Sampler" Cigars a fair trial, and benefit himself at the same time.

THE DAILY BULLETIN

Attanagh, Abbeveix, Queen's County, Ireland, December 24th, 1886.

A. J. White, Limited.

Dear Sir:—I hope that your Siegel's Syrup and Pills may get the sale they so well deserve. I had a very delicate child, a boy now over nine years, but being averse to eating any kind of vegetable or food from his birth, I began giving him Mother Siegel's Curative Syrup, and after a few weeks he recovered so as to be able to consume as much food as other boys of his age, and to the great astonishment of his neighbors, he is lively, getting into his stride and thriving as well as boys of his age do. We give all the credit of his recovery to Siegel's Syrup. Yours faithfully,
1607 1 S. MAXWELL.
