WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1900.

The long quarantine is evidently working great hardships upon people other than those who have lost their homes from plague infection. There are people here who have desired to get away, but have found it impossible because the Australia will only carry first-class passengers, and such a passage they cannot afford to pay. They are well high destitute.

The dispatch read at the Opera House Brisbane state that Buller had forced his way through the Boer lines on Wednesday 7. It is possible he may have done so very late in the day. But dispatches must be regarded with considerable doubt till they are confirmed. The report of the relief of Ladysmith was current in the coast papers of the 8th, but was very much doubted.

The recovery of Hartman, the employee of the Pantheon stables, who was stricken with plague, is an interesting case, because it is the only one in which the serum has played a successful part. It will be a case which will have much interest to the medical world. It should also give confidence to patients suffering from plague and induce them to reveal their symptoms instead of concealing them, because prompt action is the key stone of success.

President Wilder of the Senate does not enthuse over the meeting of the Legislature. The House of Representatives by meeting today can do no business, but it may save a technicality. There is no harm in calling the House together, but whether it will be of any avail is another matter. It may, however, prove a technical sheet anchor, should technicalities come up. But again, the political position of the Islands is so anomalous that precedents may be discarded.

What torpedo destroyers might be able to do against torpedo boats remains yet to be seen. The Spanish were very unfortunate with their torpedo destroyers the Pluton and Furor, and one of these was tackled and sunk by the unarmored yacht Gloucester. The whole question of torpedo boats, torpedo destroyers and torpedo vessels is an open one, which can only be settled by a naval war between two first class naval powers. A correspondent draws attention to the fact that though Great Britain is deficient in torpedo boats, she excels all nations combined in the number of her torpedo destroyers.

RAT PROOF FENCE.

That the Hotel stables will have to follow in the wake of the Pantheon stables seems certain. If the Board is to follow out its announced policy they must go. The connection between the two stables is patent. They are the property of the same corporation, and there has been mingling of employees and probably interchange of harness and of horses as occasion required.

There were three cases of plague traceable to the Pantheon. Two cases of plague, both fatal, are traceable to the Hotel stables. After the first case of plague traceable to a Hotel stable employee, the place was cleaned up and fumigated, but in spite of that action another case breaks out traceable to the same source. There is nothing for the Board to do but to follow out its regular policy.

Before burning the property it is to be strongly urged that a rat proof fence should be put round it. With the whole town entering upon a crusade against rats, it is unjust to those who are living in the vicinity of the stables to allow any chance for the rodents to be driven from their present location into the premises of others. It must be remembered that there are a number of private residences around. The cottage of Manager Lucas of the hotel is on one side, and the Dexter premises are on the other.

It is no use saying that during a fire the rats do not escape, or that the firemen always drive them back, or that two or three men with shot-guns can do the work, and exterminate the fleeing rodents. Honolulu's experience can be no different to that of any other city in like conditions, and the rat proof fence is the only effective method of preventing the rats from escaping. The people in the vicinity of the stables are unanimous in their desire for this precaution.

HOME FOR INCURABLES.

In the fever of events and the inevitable reaction afterwards the proposal of a hospital for incurables should not be lost sight of. The necessity for it has been acknowledged for years. Articles advocating such an institution have been published, letters without number have been published, and the matter has gone as far as appointing a committee of investigation. That committee has had the same fate as the committee to regulate the sepulture of the dead, a few drives have been taken, a buggy has broken down, some few cigars have been smoked at the expense of their owners, and the result has been nil.

But such apathy should not be shown now. There is no more pressing need than this hospital. Every camp inspector, and every man engaged upon camps as deputy superintendent or guard thoroughly endorses its necessity. They have seen the homeless come in, they have seen the squalid come in and they have a very thorough knowledge of the question. They know the "hopeless" home is necessary. The place to die in.

The idea in this direction is that a portion of the Kerosene camp, which has been used as a detention camp, should be organized as a home for incurables, the bulk of whom would be people in the last stages of consumption. The building is there, the Board of Health could obtain the services of a physician, or the services of some charitably disposed physician might be given, and money could be readily raised for the purpose of running expenses and the salary of a nurse. The thing is thoroughly feasible and has the support of quite a number of people. Mr. Lowrey brought the matter to the attention of the Board of Health, but no action was taken upon it. It should not be lost sight of, however, for it is an institution that is grievously needed, as all engaged in practical charity can vouch.

FILTH ELSEWHERE.

The keynote, or one may rather say, the clarion cry of "cleanliness," which Dr. Wood has sounded should not be confined to Honolulu. We have places which are bad enough still, in spite of all the burning we have done, but they can be equalled in many parts of the Islands.

On Maui the plague breeding district of Kahului was described by Dr. Wood as being in a worse condition than Honolulu's Chinatown, and those who knew it were quite ready to agree with him. It was a pity however that the President of the Board of Health was not able to make a survey of Wailuku. The writer does not remember the street names of Maui's chief city, but he has a very vivid remembrance of a street, the chief business street, which ran from the residence of Judge Kalua to the old Armstrong premises, and later occupied by the plantation office. Along this street were, and still are, rows of insanitary shacks which would make a plague germ howl with delight. The ground on which these shacks are built is saturated with filth, just as the ground in Chinatown was saturated. No amount of cleaning and white washing will improve the conditions to any appreciable extent. If plague once gets in there, and there can be no certainty as yet that it will not get in there, it will find a very congenial home.

Of the sanitary and insanitary conditions of Hilo Dr. Wood gained some knowledge during his late visit to the rainy city, and the inhabitants have been carrying on a fierce crusade against the filth breeding centers. But it must be remembered that no amount of whitewashing and cleaning will get rid of the danger of plague if reeking cesspools and filth saturated ground are beneath the cleaned up shacks. Such places are merely whitened sepulchres and are the more dangerous in that they give a sense of security which they do not possess. The rain, for which Hilo is often laughed at, has very probably been its greatest source of safety, since the copious down pours have sluiced out the ill smelling and insanitary places.

On this Island quite a number of insanitary places exist. There is a nest of shacks in Waiakua which will equal almost any of the dens that recent investigation has brought to public notice. The same may be said of Kaneohe, and Waianae has also its crop of insanitary shacks, and scattered round Oahu some pretty bad places may be found. If they are not plague breeders, they are fever breeders certainly, and should be forced into sanitary condition.

Kauai, the Garden Island, has its insanitary hovels as well as any other part of the group. Along the left bank of the Hanalei river there are stores and shacks quite equal in plague possibilities to any that can be pointed to elsewhere. There used to be a very insanitary lot of buildings in Waiimea at the foot of the bluff where the Campbell house stood. There used to be some unsavory spots in the Hanapepe valley.

Molokai has greatly changed but it certainly has not become some sanitary since the change, for fever has become almost epidemic. Of course this is in a great measure to be attributed to the opening up of new soil, but there used to be some very insanitary habitations and these spots are not likely to have improved very much during the last two, or three years.

Any one having a knowledge of the Islands can readily understand how insanitary conditions have arisen, and such conditions have not done much harm because the population was sparse. But as the population has come crowding in the conditions have begun to tell, and it is clearly the duty of the Board of Health to have active agents in every part of the group, and the President should make occasional trips around himself. The logical conclusion from this is that the office of the President of the Board of Health should have a salary attached.

It is thus clear that when we have conquered our plague, we have rather a big contract on our hands. But we must force our way forward. It is not enough to clean Honolulu, the whole group must be put in order, and then only constant vigilance will keep us up to the high hygienic standard that we must aim at.

FIGHTING JOE WHEELER.
"Fighting Joe Wheeler," Brigadier-General, U. S. A., and now a member of Congress, unless his seat is taken away from him on a technicality, on account of his army service, arrived here this morning on the transport Warren from Manila and Guam. The general has resigned from the army and is going to Washington to take his seat in Congress. "I have a letter saying that an effort will be made to keep me from taking my seat," said the general this afternoon. "But I do not see why such an effort should succeed. The objection is that I was not on hand to be sworn in and it is stated that I was holding another position that militates against my right to be elected. I shall go to Washington having resigned from the army and with a proper certificate of election, and expect to be sworn in."
General Wheeler is a remarkably active man, having stood the rigors of a Philippine campaign better than most of the young soldiers. His wonderful activity is a source of astonishment to all his companions. The general spent four days riding about the island of Guam. As to the situation in the Philippines and Guam he says that all is very satisfactory in both places. "The war is over," said the general, "except for the work of guerilla bands that ambush our troops and do a little damage. Just before I left I heard of a case in which one American soldier was killed and several wounded."

was brought judicially to the notice of the District Court this morning. Two young men were before Judge Wilcox charged with riding bicycles on the sidewalk at this place. They acknowledged the charge, but said it was because of the condition of the street. Judge Wilcox adjudged their defense a good one, and discharged the defendants.
In doing this the court said he would like to know whether the Minister of Interior had authorized this use of the street as a reservoir for flood waters, and if he had not why some steps were not taken to abate what he considered a nuisance and an invasion of the rights of the public to the use of the street.
