

The Ins and Outs of It.

If you get best wear out of a coat, best work must have gone into it. You can't get good bread out of poor flour.

Moral: You can't get the best out of anything, unless the best is in it; and the best has to be put in before it can be taken out. Now, we have a rule to test those sarsaparillas with a big "best" on the bottle. "Tell us what's put in you and we'll decide for ourselves about the best." That's fair. But these modest sarsaparillas say: "Oh! we can't tell. It's a secret. Have faith in the label."... Stop! There's one exception; one sarsaparilla that has no secret to hide. It's Ayer's. If you want to know what goes into Ayer's Sarsaparilla, ask your doctor to write for the formula. Then you can satisfy yourself that you get the best of the sarsaparilla argument when you get Ayer's.

It kills doubts but cures doubters.

So many things are advertised by dealers as suited to the wants of persons who delight in giving during the Christmas season. Nearly every merchant or manufacturer advertises that his wares are suitable for Christmas; it doesn't make any difference whether it is a needle case or a 12 ton roller. We differ from most merchants because we believe our stock contains the only useful articles fit to be put in a stocking. In these festive times when Santa Claus has ceased in the minds of anyone above a four year old, useful and beautiful presents are selected. Where is the Miss of fifteen who would not rather have a set of China in her stocking than a wax doll? We have sets or single pieces fit to grace any table—beautiful French Ware with handsome decorations.

But our stock of Cut Glass is what wins the ladies. Competition in this line of goods has brought the price down with us to a trifle above cost—it is cheap enough now to go into the homes of the poor. We have everything in the line—Pepper and Salts, Oils, Vinegar, Asparagus Dishes, Rose Bowls, Butter Tubs, etc., etc.

1895 Rambler,
$75.00

Trusting that you may be interested in cycling, we take the liberty of stating to you a few facts about our wheels:

We need not trouble you with needless description of the World Famed "RAMBLER" Bicycle, which by its easy running, appearance, strength and lasting qualities has won for the makers a name world renowned.

The "RAMBLERS" are equipped with the great G. & J. Detachable Tire, which since its introduction to Honolulu has proved, by the numbers in use, the most successful and necessary adjustment to a bicycle.

We take great pleasure in recommending to our friends the "RAMBLER" and trust that in furnishing one to any person they will never have occasion to regret.

Our terms are such that a bicycle is no longer a luxury but a necessity in actual saving of time and money. We would ask you to but call and get our figures.

1896 Rambler.
$95.00

As is customary near the close of each year, the makers in order to get ready for the ensuing year, offer the present 1896 wheels at reduced prices. We are now prepared to give our customers the benefit of these reductions as long as our stock holds out. For those wishing an up to date wheel of the highest grade, one which we can guarantee to the fullest extent, we would offer the "RAMBLER." As to improvements for the coming season we would say we anticipate none. Such changes which may be made will, as has been the past two years, be changes immaterial to the improvement of the wheel in general.

Kindly give this some thought or call your friends' attention to it and oblige.

Yours truly,

home, but I feared the canoe would turn over. While I was sketching one of the boatmen dived into the water. He stayed down for a long time and then came up with a sort of starfish, with spikes like a porcupine. The two men had a great feast and offered me some of the star fish, which tasted like an oyster. When I would say go ashore the boatmen would let the boat go on top of a big wave and we would shoot through the surf at such a terrific rate it made my hair stand on end, but I clung to the canoe and landed safe each time.

"One of the most entrancing views is that at the Pali at the end of Nuuanu Valley, about four miles from Honolulu. There are great mountains to the right and left and through an opening you get one enchanting view of valley covered with sugar plantations and bananas and in the far distance a range of mountains and still farther off the blue Pacific looking like a painted sea. The Pali is over 1400 feet high. I painted a picture of the Pali which was bought by Mr. Peacock. At the summit where I had to paint there is a whirlwind blowing at the rate of fifty miles an hour, sometimes more than that. A native on horseback was blown over the cliff. When I first went there my paints paper and traps were blown into the air far above my head. Before I could get a good sketch I had to go six or eight times to the same spot. Even then I could use only a small bit of paper and had to take in the scene on separate pieces in the face of the gale. An easel was out of the question, and it was hard work to hold the paints down.

"On the trip to the island of Hawaii I was treated to a most magnificent sunset; it was tropical and glorious. The ride to the volcano, or mountain of fire, I found to be one of the most interesting excursions, the trail passing through the virgin forest and every turn in the road finding a new scene. All about us were wild bananas, palm trees, fern trees, creeping plants—a picture of tropical glory, with here and there a coffee plantation peeping through the forest, each vista a beautiful sight. Farther up the mountain the flora takes on the character of the temperate zone, and at last there is nothing but lava. My party took no guide to the crater. As we stood beside the cavern of fire I felt the ground tremble and a sickening sensation came upon me. 'For heaven's sake let us get out of this,' I said, and we walked back from the verge of the cliff. One minute later the spot where we were standing crumbled away and fell into the fire with a roar; one minute later and had we remained there would be no more artist.

"There is a strange bird that makes its home at this volcano, the boatswain bird. It has its young about the cliffs and flies to the sea a distance of twenty or thirty miles for fish to feed them.

"The coffee and sugar plantations make pretty landscapes with a background of purple mountains, an intense blue sky and some touches of bright green palms and banana trees. The harbor of Waianai, at which are many of these plantations, reminds one of the bay of Naples, and is certainly worthy of a visit by tourists."

The waterfalls of Hawaii, where a hundred streams tumble down the mountains and eventually over a cliff into the ocean, were seen and sketched by Mr. Fisher; and also the famous rainbow falls, where the prismatic arch dances eternally in the sunshine. The natural bridge at Ono was not missed, for it appears in the portfolio as a wall of purple rock jutting into the sea and clad with tropical shrubs. It has a picturesque appearance, this bit of island coast scenery, though the colors to one who has never seen Hawaii are certainly startling.

CANE SUGAR.

Influences are in operation in many quarters which, if given great heed to, might almost be expected to stampede investment in sugar cane cultivation. Leading British investors in West India sugar are, or were lately, considering the advisability of asking the Colonial Office to have a commission sent to the West Indies to inquire into the critical condition of the sugar industry. While Mr. Lubbock, head of the principal West India sugar company, thinks the proposed commission would have no effect, he wants the British government to take some action, in conjunction with some other countries, for regulating the production of sugar. He says that Germany and Austria are quite prepared to enter into an international agreement with that end in view.

Commenting on the proposal to send a commission to the West Indies, the San Francisco Chronicle says "that course might be advisable if the trouble could be laid to insects, high priced labor or the process of grinding, but the Government is well aware that cane flourishes as of old in Jamaica and the other islands thereabouts, that wages have not been raised and that the product of the mills retains its quality." The Chronicle goes on to attribute the sugar depression to economic causes, saying that "four years ago it was perfectly evident what would happen to the cane sugar industry everywhere." It gives the figures of increase in beet sugar, along with decrease in cane sugar production, and concludes thus: "Hence it needs no learned commission to determine why the sugar business does not flourish in the Spanish main. Any one can see that it is because cane sugar is getting out of date and beet sugar, as a product of equal or better quality, lower price and a far wider area of production, is taking its place."

The San Francisco Call cites two interesting facts. Speaker Reed had appealed to the Duluth chamber of commerce for a vigorous support of a revenue bill before Congress this winter. A report issued by the Department of State showed that the sugar supply of the world this year would be one of the largest ever known. The Call takes it that the revenue measure in question is the Dingley bill, and it strongly objects to that as providing no protection for American sugar. It points out that the issue is one of particular importance to California, with its great beet sugar enterprises and prospects for their further development.

It is the opinion of the BULLETIN that the present ascendancy of beet sugar is in a great degree artificial. The over-production induced by pampering the beet sugar industry in Europe—or America either if that country reverts to the system,—must before long work its own remedy. There is no assurance of popular support for any length of time, in the countries paying bounties, to a system that is such a glaring and barefaced scheme of robbing Peter to pay Paul. Besides, the impetus that system gives to production is not likely to spend itself until it will be a case of beet beating beet down as well as cane in the world's markets. When the pinch comes, as come it will, the manufacturer will begin to pinch the grower. Beet is likely as soon to be stamped as cane by the influences of the present situation. Large profits from beet culture in California will, in the natural course of things, lead to the overdoing of the industry in that country with results that will give cane sugar a recurrence of its periodical good innings. Hawaiian sugar survived the deprivation of American protection wrought by the McKinley Act, and that in a period of low prices. Having done so it will not be stampeded by the no worse influences that now menace it in common with the product of other cane-growing countries. There is always, moreover, the saving clause that low prices will induce increased consumption. Frequently it has happened in the past that a low state of the market had passed away while an increased crop in Hawaii was coming to maturity.

According to an item elsewhere, somebody is going to try salmon breeding in these islands. Kauai is probably the only island having rivers suitable for the habitat of this fish.

Santa Claus is extremely fond of receiving letters from the little ones. He generally offers a valuable prize of some kind to well behaved children and this year he has notified Wall, Nichols Co., who are to act as his agents here, to offer in his name a beautiful French doll to the Honolulu girl or boy who writes him the most original letter. Any little one under ten years of age may compete for the doll which is sure to be highly prized by the lucky recipient. Now, girls, this is your opportunity. Brush the cobwebs and dust of puzzling questions out of your minds and write the old gentleman a nice letter; something different from anything you have ever written before. You may ask your papas and mammas how to spell the words but the thoughts and good wishes should be all your own.

On honor, now!

Letters may be mailed in the letter box at Wall, Nichols Co's store between 9 o'clock next Saturday morning, Nov. 28th, and 12 o'clock noon of December 24th, the day before Christmas.

The doll will be on exhibition in one of their large show windows during the above period. The judges of the merits of the letters received will be decided upon by representatives of the press of Honolulu.

Delays are not always dangerous, old sayings to the contrary notwithstanding. If the Alameda had not been delayed in San Francisco the last trip, we would have been without our enlarged stock of Sterling silver ware and our customers would have had to limit their purchases.

But now we have the goods, and they are ready for your inspection, ready to be sent home to you. This last invoice is from the celebrated Whiting Silver Company, and the prices are so low that it is cheaper in the long run than powder. The assortment comprises everything, from an ordinary butter pick to a food pusher. We mention the latter as though it was a common every day affair, but it's not—it's rare.

If you are interested read this partial list and remember that the material of which the cases are made is the finest.

Sardine Servers silk case, $4.05; Child's Set, knife, fork and spoon in handsome case, $6.60; Pie Knives in case, $10.20; Cake Knives in silk case, $11.05; Butter Knives in kid case, $4.75; Pickle Forks, silk case, $3.75; Sugar Spoons, silk case, $3.50; Sugar Spoons, silk case, $6.40; Bon Bon Tongs, kid case, $4.20; Napkin Rings, from $1.15 to $4.20; Brandy Flasks, Fruit Knives, Tea, Dessert, Table and Soup Spoons; Dessert, Table and Fish Forks; Butter Dishes—without covers; Silver Bread and Butter Plates; Knife Rests, Butter Picks and Spreaders, Oyster Forks, Fish and Dessert Knives, Coffee, Salt and Mustard Spoons.

21 KAAHUMANU ST.

AT ST. KEVERNE.

Keverne, in Cornwall, had a new rector, a young and talented man, remarkable at his early age for learning and piety.

To this desirable living the young rector brought his only sister, orphaned almost from her birth. Ada Thornton had no relative living save this darling brother, who, in her opinion, was the best, the wisest of men. Nor was she wrong.

Yet there came a time when Ada's supremacy in her brother's affections seemed to be threatened. In vain had rich and titled ladies stooped to solicit the handsome rector's attentions, but to one of his parochial visits among the poorer class of his hearers he met with a lady whom he thought superior to any he had known.

Marion Livermore rented two or three modest rooms for herself and a little half sister—a child born when Marion was already a woman grown and who, like herself, never knew a mother's love. Like Gerald, she had devoted herself to the orphan sister.

It was on a Saturday evening that he had ventured, after hearing an animated eulogium upon her by Ada, to disclose to the latter his preference, and her reply convinced him that he had chosen wisely, so far at least as concerned his sister. On that day he had solved all his doubts of Marion's love and had talked of the marriage day, and frankly and candidly, without any attempt at blushing or hesitation, she set an early day in the following month.

The Sabbath morning rose bright and serene—the very sweetest repose of nature in her June magnificence. The spire of St. Keverne loomed up fair and straight into the blue ether, and the merry bells rang out in the clear summer air, sending a thrill of pleasure to every one who heard the joyful sound.

Soon the rectory door opened and Gerald and his sister walked arm in arm to the church. As they entered the little chancel Gerald remarked how gloriously the sun shone upon the beautifully stained windows.

"But for all that, your reverence will find that there will be a storm before night," said an old man near him.

"Nay, Lawton," he answered pleasantly. "You shall not spoil this delightful day by croaking of what it may end in."

The parishioners swarmed in, and the church was soon filled to overflowing. It chanced, of all days, that he took for his text that portion of the beautiful Twenty-third psalm, "Yes, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

What untold depths of tenderness, of filial love, of sweet dependence upon the Father were in Gerald's words!

People sat with clasped hands and lips apart and eyes that bore witness to their sympathy in the tears that rained from them. In their deep emotion they saw not that the chancel had grown dark since they walked in from the bright sunlight. Shadows deep and heavy gathered around them, and the faces of minister and people grew dim to each other, but they knew not that it was night but tears that obscured their vision.

Another moment, and then a long, long rattle of heaven's loudest artillery, crash upon crash, electrified the whole crowd. There was silence no longer. Shrieks and prayers and groans were intermingled, and many fell down in fits on the floor of their pews, while others were struggling to get out.

Marion Livermore and Ada Thornton lay upon the seat apparently lifeless. A strong, sulphurous smell was perceptible to the sense, and also that of burning linen. And now, from the roof of St. Keverne rattled down the enormous stones composing it. Down they came into every pew in the church, some of them, as was afterward ascertained, weighing over 100 pounds, the noise of their falling drowning that of the hall that had been crashing against the window panes. It was a moment of terrible excitement for all who were conscious. Gerald came down from the desk to where lay the two unconscious beings whom most he loved amid the wreck of the woodwork and the heaps of fallen stones. Every moment it seemed certain that death was near to all. The heat, the suffocating smell, the great stones falling not only inside, but threatening the heads of all who were blindly trying to escape from the church, all made it evident enough that the danger was terrible and imminent.

A great struggle was tearing the heart of the rector. Which of those helpless women should he try to bear away in safety? It seemed hardly possible, when he looked at the torn roof above, that he could be able to return for the one he must leave. Both were reasonable, perhaps dead.

The struggle lasted but a moment. The next he was bearing his sister through the ranks of flying people who were endeavoring to escape.

Weeks after this a pale image that was once Gerald Thornton lay upon a low couch at the rectory, the mere shadow of what he was. All that time he had been unconscious.

When he raised his head, a dear friend sat beside him, a young man who had once yielded to temptation, but whom Gerald's ministry had rescued from ruin. He grasped the pale, thin hand of his minister with a fervor and gladness that found its way to Gerald's heart.

"Are they all gone, Edwin?" he whispered, almost calmly, for he had been communing with the Consoler of Spirits during his moments of tearfulness.

"Not all," answered his friend. "Are you able to bear cheerful news?"

What a conflict was in his heart! No one save Ada had known of his attachment to Marion Livermore. Perhaps Ada, then, was living, and another loved one had been taken. But before he could answer Ada glided into his outstretched arms, and close behind her came Marion.

Over that meeting we must draw a veil. Such a parting must surely make the meeting too sacred for witness. The church of St. Keverne was duly repaired, and in a few weeks the desk was supplied by the rector himself, while in the seat below sat the rector's sister and his wife.

HIGH PRICE FOR OLD BOOKS.

Nearly Eighteen Hundred Dollars for a Single Volume

London, Dec. 6.—The test of the market for old and rare books is the current price of a copy of Isaac Walton's "Compleat Angler," published in 1653. One was sold at auction this week for $1750, which is the record price. In 1879, a fine copy, in choice binding, was offered for $200, and the seller appended an apology for fixing so high a price. He explained that, with one exception, a copy had not been offered in twenty years. The exception was one example, included in a set of five editions, sold for $340, and afterward resold for $500 in 1889. Another copy that came under the hammer produced $900. By 1891 the value had mounted to $1550, though in the following year a copy fetched no more than $1000. It is not the "Compleat Angler" alone which has gone up in price. Many seventeenth and eighteenth century books are in constantly increasing demand. A good deal less than a generation ago the first edition of the "Vicar of Wakefield" could be got for $25, but in 1892 a copy sold for $490. The original issue of Gray's "Elegy," which was first published at 6d in 1751, mounted from $180 in 1888 to $370 in 1893.

Condemned.

The judgments in the cases of the Ainoka, Viva and Beatrice, seized for being found sealing within the 60-mile prohibited zone in Behring sea, were delivered in Admiralty on Monday by Mr. Drake. The court found that the vessels had been sealing within the prohibited zone and that the defence set up as to stress of weather being the cause of the positions of the vessels when seized had not been satisfactorily established. He ordered the three schooners with their equipment condemned, but provided that they be released on payment by each of £400 and costs within thirty days. His lordship held that if vessels were allowed immunity on the plea that they got into prohibited waters through accident, ignorance or mistake it would be impossible to enforce the Behring sea regulations. In the case of the schooner Anorora, which was discharged the other day, the Court awarded the vessel costs, but no damages, as His Lordship held that there had been a reasonable cause shown for the seizure. —Vancouver World.

Albani's Black Cat.

In speaking of her own debut Madame Albani vouches for the following amusing incident, says the Strand Magazine: "I made my debut in London at Covent Garden on April 2, 1872, in my favorite Amina, and I don't mind confessing that I attributed a good deal of my success that night to the sudden appearance of a big black cat. I am very superstitious. I always occupy the same room at the theatre—it is one of the largest in the house. Just as I was all ready and preparing to go on the stage the door was slowly and silently pushed open, and one of the biggest black cats imaginable peeped in and looked at me. Oh! how delighted I was! Yes, I don't wonder at your smiling, but a black cat has always been a lucky thing for me, and I would welcome one at any time;" and the gifted artiste laughs heartily as she tells that she does not keep one specially in the house to ensure good fortune entering at the front door.

Speaking of Weather.

"There is no spot on the Pacific Coast, and perhaps in the entire world where the summer days are pleasanter than in Seattle," said a well-known New York traveling man yesterday. "Such a day as this, for instance, is the very perfection of summer—neither too hot nor windy, just simply perfect. Just think what a treat you Seattleites have: such delicious weather as this—the kind that makes your soul attune to the poetry of existence. Could you imagine anything nicer than a day like this and a bottle of Rainier Beer? The day will make you enjoy Rainier Beer, and Rainier Beer will make you enjoy the day. Rainier Beer is a delightful beverage for summer. On tap or in bottles at the Criterion."

A Family Affair.

Agents, Beware! The stories told about the brazen cheek of commercial agents have been increased in number by the following: Railway Official (breaking the news gently to the wife of a commercial traveler)—Ahem! Madam, be calm. Your husband has met with a slight—that is to say, one of the front wheels of a passenger locomotive struck him on the cheek, and— Wife—Well, sir, you needn't come round here trying to collect damages. You won't get a penny from me. If your company can't keep its property out of danger, it'll have to take the consequences. You should have your engines insured.—Pearson's Weekly.

Information for Tourists. A passenger by the last Colonial steamer was met on the deck by a Milesian American friend, who resides in Honolulu. As the pair waited to have the newcomer's gripack scrawled over with chalk marks by the Customs Inspector at the gate the stranger remarked to his friend "Do you have much rain here?" RAINIER the boy, gallons of it, just come up to the Anchor Saloon where they keep it always, clear and cool. We'd just be in time for lunch too, and that's the only place in town where they serve it up in proper style with a glass of RAINIER BEER to equilibrialize the solids.—They went!

Steamboats Must Pay. Albany, N. Y., Dec. 8.—That a passenger on a steamboat who loses his money from a stateroom while he is an actual occupant of the room is entitled to recover from the steamboat owners is the decision of the court of appeals today. The action was brought by Henry C. Adams against the New Jersey Steamship Company to recover $100 which was stolen from him while asleep in his stateroom.

LEWIS & Co.

Hawaii does not grow the proper tree for Christmas, so imitation ones are made that will answer just as well for small children. We have some that may be used from year to year. And we have the finest lot of tree ornaments ever shown in Honolulu.

We have also a large stock of Christmas tree candles in assorted colors which we sell at twenty five cents a box. The ornaments and candles will make your Christmas tree beautiful.

For the table on Christmas we have a fascinating list of articles, things you may not find elsewhere and we can sell them at prices which will enable the people with moderate purses to have them. In Plum Puddings, essentially a Christmas dessert, we have a series made by Richardson & Robbins, and Gordon & Diworth. No pudding in the world equals these in flavor or quality of ingredients used.
