MAUNA LOA FIRE FOUNTAINS American Alaskan Claims Conceded

Bulletin's Correspondent in First Party to Visit Crater—No Lava Flow But Magnificent Display Within the Crater—No Diminution in Activity.

[Special to The Bulletin.] HILO, Hawaii, Oct. 16.—To the readers of The Bulletin, I have this to say first: In the material world you cannot see a more stupendous spectacle than that which is spread before you as you stand on the edge of the crater of Mauna Loa. While your physical strength is almost exhausted by the long climb and the greater stress imposed by rarified atmosphere, and dramatic environment, you still will feel the stimulus which compels the attention of every faculty. The display in the crater of Mokuaweweoe makes man give homage. The pyrotechnics of fire and light and sound leave nothing to be done to the human harp of strings of sensation. The spectacular takes possession of your soul. You are helpless in the grasp of sensations, and hitherto unknown. You are a pygmy trembling in the shadow of giants.

awe upon the untrammelled frolic of the God of Fire. Those who seek for the unusual should go to the volcano. The people of Hawaii look from their door-yards upon a magnificent display of light, reflected from clouds and boiling columns of steam and smoke. But to stand face to face with the overpowering argument of the unbridled forces of the nether world you must make the trip to the crater. When we stood above the vortex of flame, over 13,000 feet above the level of the sea last Tuesday night, we were greeted with a roar as of a tempest at sea. The Fountains of Fire were playing with their display of power as the lambs in their innocence play upon the meadows. From tropical heat, where grows the palm, the fern, and where the soft airs play, we passed above altitude and altitude until we came to bleak cold stretches of black, cheerless lava, strewn with frost and covered with ice-cracks. We were amazed and overcome with the realm of Pluto that was spread before us. We tethered our horses to stones near the yawning depths of Mokuaweweoe. We looked down upon a waste of barren rock. Forbidding and deserted would have been the scene but for the display of Madame Pele at our feet. We sat on the rim of a giant crater. In its bottom, one thousand feet below, was a smaller crater, two thousand feet across. Molten lava, white with heat and flowing as the tidal, welled up and illuminated the caverns of Mokuaweweoe. From the lake of fire twenty or thirty great fiery arms reached upward a distance of three hundred to eight hundred feet. These great geysers of illuminating fluid cast their glare of light on walls of lava, on clouds and upon the bleak black plateau which is the summit of Mauna Loa. Amid the din of noise, with mountain sickness benumbing our faculties, and the cold, cold, cold of twenty above zero searching our bones, we were yet electrified. Below us was the panorama of smoke and reflected light, which obscured the stars. All about us was the cloak of darkness which shut us from the world nearly three miles below. The only speech was that of unbridled, rebellious fire. Our greeting was the roar of an Alpine avalanche. Tons of molten lava, thrown high in the air, fell back upon the lava lake in broken fragments of solidified rock, boulders and scraps. From the bosom of the lake of fire great columns of incandescent lava arose with the rhythm and hideous noise of a steam caldron. No moment of repose came to the fiery bed of the natural caldron at our feet. All was tumult and splendor of action. As humble, helpless creatures in the presence of unbridled Nature we looked and saw and worshipped.

In company with twelve eager men, I left Monsarrat's ranch for the crater, early Monday morning. Half an hour behind his horse, in front was the guide. All that was required of each man was that he stick to his mount and wait. When the round trip had been made, we found that the expense equally divided amounted to less than $10 each. We left the ranch early Monday morning. We camped Monday night near the timber line. Tuesday's march brought us to the crater's edge at 2 o'clock p. m. There we found clear cold ice water, melting from benten snows in the lava cracks. We lamented the absence of a single bucket with which to minister to the cravings of our horses. They were compelled to go three days without water. The trail is not bad if some one knows the way. There are steep places and rough places. You must give free rein to your horse and trust in God. So far, no one has found an easier or surer way of reaching the summit than via Monsarrat's ranch. A Hilo party tried to reach the summit direct, starting last Saturday, but lost their way in the upper lava stretches and consuming their water supply were compelled to go home to save their lives. If you are going to the crater, take plenty of blankets and carry small equipment of food and drink. In

American Alaskan Claims Conceded

[Associated Press Special Cable.] LONDON, England, Oct. 17.—The Alaskan Boundary Commission has verbally agreed to grant all the American contentions except that regarding the Portland Canal and a few small islands. The two principal points under discussion have been, first: which of several fjords marking the entrance to the Portland Channel was the Portland Channel meant in the boundary agreement of 1823 between Russia and England. Second: the summits of the coast mountains marking the boundary may not in some cases be less than thirty miles from the coast, in which case, according to the wording of the treaty, their summits would be the boundary line. Although this leaves the status of important towns in doubt, the result is considered a victory for the American claimants. The formal agreement will be drawn later.

Japan Demands Treaty And Agreement Waits

[Associated Press Special Cable.] YOKOHAMA, Japan, Oct. 17.—Japan is determined to have a treaty with Russia setting forth its position in the Orient. This is delaying the agreement and promises new dangers for the already serious complications. Both countries are making active preparation for hostilities, though assurances are given that war will be averted.

Oriental Delay Dangerous

[Associated Press Special Cable.] PARIS, France, Oct. 17.—The continued delay of Russia and Japan in reaching an agreement is regarded as lending a very serious aspect to the situation in the Orient.

HUNDRED MILLION NAVY

[Associated Press Special Cable.] WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 17.—Secretary of the Navy Moody in his annual report stands sponsor for the broadest Naval program in the history of the country. He approves of Naval estimates for the coming fiscal year calling for an expenditure of $102,500,000.

Work Train Telescoped

[Associated Press Special Cable.] TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 17.—A gravel train out on construction work near Trenton today telescoped a work train loaded with railway workmen. Fifteen men were killed and forty injured.

PACIFIC SOCIAL CLUB. YACHT AND WATCH.

At a meeting of the Pacific Social Club in the hall of the organization last night, Mondays and Saturdays were decided on as the regular dancing nights for the future. Music will be furnished by an excellent string band and the merry dancers of the club and their friends may always be assured of a good time. The first of the dances under the new order of things will be held this Saturday evening at the hall of the club, terminus of the Punchbowl line. A very large crowd is expected.

Judge DeBolt this morning authorized Administrator A. F. Cooke of the Estate of Walter E. Lee, deceased, to deliver to the two eldest sons, Manoel and Walter Lee, a yacht and gold watch respectively, according to administrator's petition. For this the two young men sign away any further claims on the estate which is worth about $1,000 and to which the widow and three other co-heirs are heirs.

BACK TO CONGENIAL ATMOSPHERE OF GILBERT ISLANDS

The steamer Kinau, which arrived from Hilo this forenoon, brought the whole population of the well-known "South Sea Island Settlement" near Lahaina. There were eighty-five souls altogether—men, women and children—all supremely happy over the prospect of a speedy return to their native land. The whole crowd was assembled 'tween decks, aft, when the Kinau arrived at the wharf. They huddled closely together grasping tightly the heterogeneous bundles which contained as much of their scanty belongings as they had been able to gather together at the short notice they had been given. "Are you all going back to the Gilbert Islands?" asked a Bulletin reporter of one of the men who seemed to be the leader of the flock. "Oh, yes; certainly," he answered with a happy smile. "We are all here. No one is left at Lahaina. We will all go home together." Rev. Hiram Bingham and British Consul Hoare, through whose efforts the whole scheme, which brings immeasurable joy to about 200 hearts, has been perfected, met the South Sea Islanders as they came down on the wharf. Rev. Mr. Bingham conversed with the people in their own tongue and it was very plainly to be seen that his island proteges felt for him all the great respect and love which he deserves.

Mr. Bingham stated that while all the necessary financial arrangements had not as yet been made, it was now a positive certainty that every one of the South Sea Islanders who wants to return to the Gilberts, will go. Up to the time of arrival of the Kinau $650 had been raised. Part of this amount the Gilbert Islanders living in the Kalih'i Camp got together from their savings. Part of it was subscribed by philanthropists of this city. There thus remains only $350 to complete the sum of $1,000 which the steamer Isleworth will charge to take 200 Islanders back to the Gilberts. Mr. Bingham states that he is positive that this amount will be raised. The Gilbert Islanders from the Lahaina settlement, who arrived at the Kinau today, have altogether savings amounting to $826. Of this one man, the capitalist of the crowd, owns $237. The rest is pretty evenly distributed among the remaining members of the settlement. Up until the arrival of the Kinau, passage had been arranged for ninety of the Islanders, not counting the children. Mr. Bingham and Consul Hoare figure that about 193 will leave in the Isleworth. BORN. KELLY—In Honolulu, October 16, 1903, to the wife of R. S. Kelly, a daughter. Tax Assessor Pratt has referred to Auditor Fisher for a supply of dog license tags. The Auditor is not sure that this comes under "books and blanks for county offices" but will meet the demand nevertheless.

ELECTION MEANS $300 POSTAGE

By the time the county elections are over some three hundred dollars or more will have been expended in postage. The mass of matter that has been sent through the mail and is still to be appreciated when one considers what an immense amount of stuff, from first to fourth class, can be carried by Uncle Sam for three hundred dollars. Ballots are sent to all the voting precincts by registered mail and this means eight cents extra on every package. Postage on ballots runs about thirty cents to the hundred. Electoral Registrar Buckland finds the business of preparing for November 3 entails evenings and Sundays fully occupied. KINAU IN PORT. The steamer Kinau arrived from Hilo and way ports at about 11 o'clock this forenoon with the following freight: 5 horses, 82 crates felt, 192 packages sundries. Admiral Beckley reports that when the Kinau was at Lahaina during the early hours this morning the reflection from the Volcano could be seen plainly. Judge Gear has signed decrees confirming sale and deficiency judgment in the bills for foreclosure of mortgages in W. O. Smith, trustee for Austin Lidgate, vs. M. G. Silva et al. and W. O. Smith et al., trustees, under the will of W. C. Lunallo vs. M. G. Silva et al.

TALK ABOUT YOUR HARD LUCK STORIES

The Healan masquerade will be given at the Alexander Young Hotel on November 4.—Advertiser, Oct. 17, page 2. THE BULLETIN BLUNDERS. The announcement made by the Bulletin yesterday that the date of the Healan masquerade is definitely settled for Nov. 4, has been corrected by the committee. The original date, as announced in the Advertiser of last Sunday, is Friday evening, November 6, at the Alexander Young hotel, Friday having been chosen to permit of patrona resting after the half day's work on Saturday.—Advertiser, Oct. 17, (same issue), page 7. LIGHTS FOR KAIMUKI. In a week's time, residents of Kaimuki will be in a position to relegate their lamps to the cellar or some other out of the way place. The Hawaiian Electric Company, having arranged with the Rapid Transit Company for the use of its poles, is now putting up the arms that are to carry the wires out to the people in Kaimuki. Men of the Electric Company are authority for the statement that this work will be completed by the end of next week. Residents of Kaimuki may then have their lights installed immediately. Many good things are now coming to those who have believed in Kaimuki from the beginning and their patience is being rewarded. First the electric cars and now the light. Next will come the installation of modern telephones and other things that go to make life worth the living.

KOHALA DITCH SALE MAY BE HELD UP

But a few days remain before the Kohala ditch franchise, according to the majority decision of the executive council, will be advertised for sale at public auction, the sale to take place on November 28. It was said today that, inasmuch as it was the province of the Land Commissioner to authorize the advertisement of the sale and he had dissented in the meeting of the executive council to certain clauses in the license as adopted by Governor Dole and others of the council, there was a strong possibility of his refusing to be responsible for the publication of the notice of public sale. Land Commissioner Boyd was seen on the subject and asked whether he intended advertising the sale of the Kohala ditch franchise. Mr. Boyd replied that he was not prepared to say anything on the subject just now, one way or the other. The advertising of the public sale of the privilege was business belonging to his department and at the proper time he would act as he believed was right. He might give notice of the sale and he might not. "I would like you to say," said Mr. Boyd, "that the base insinuations made by the Advertiser yesterday morning while referring to Mr. A. C. Gehr and myself dining together, endeavoring to make capital of the incident for its own low ends, were noted by me with more amusement than anger, although in some places such deliberate misrepresentations would be the beginning of a shooting affair."

BLOCK SYSTEM OF CITY. A. V. Gear is now at work with a corps of assistants on a system of blocking the city, which, in years to come, will prove of incalculable value not only to himself but to the many who will require information with reference to real estate in the city. This system, used in a few of the great cities of the Mainland, will show the size, value, owner and original title of each piece of real estate in the city and will open up to inquirers information that could never be obtained heretofore. Mr. Gear believes that better times and increased valuations in real estate will soon be here and it is with this in mind that he has set out to map and make records of every piece of real estate there is in the city. Already maps have been made of all the tracts of land that have been put on the market during the past twenty-five years and these give a record of the ownership of every lot. Although it will take six months yet to complete this valuable block system, when it is completed it will be something of great value. High old time—The grandfather's clock.

THE ONLY No-Under-Shadow Light

There's nothing misleading about that heading.

The Angle Lamp

It, in its effect, exactly like sunlight. It is, like the sun, up out of the way, end throws its clear, enjoyable light both outward and downward with no bothersome shadows to annoy or to spoil the lighting effect. There's no other light does that—no other light that has "NO-UNDER-SHADOW" But don't stop at that; look at the other features, too. With a minimum of expense, of trouble and of heat there is obtained a maximum of light and real satisfaction. Every annoying feature of gas, electricity, gasolene and acetylene is obviated. This tells the story of a great combination. It uses ordinary kerosene (or coal) oil—one quart in sixteen hours. Its light is more brilliant than gas or electricity, with no more heat—no smoke—no odor—no "drawing up"—no removing of globe or top to light—filled while burning.

THEO. H. DAVIES & Co., Limited,

IN MEMORY OF

Elizabeth Kaumuanu, daughter of Keenumoku and Namahana. She was born at about 1773 at the foot of the hill Kauihi on East Maui; became a wife of Kamehameha I at thirteen, and was his favorite until his death in 1819. After the death of Kamehameha II in 1823, she wisely ruled the Hawaiian people as Queen Regent until her death in 1825. Although naturally proud and haughty she early in her Regency accepted Jesus as her Saviour, was baptized in Kawaiahao in 1825, and labored earnestly to lead her people to Christ. She was spoken of by the American Mission as "a distinguished reformer of her nation, a kind friend and benefactress of the Missionaries, and a faithful comforter of the infant churches in these isles." As she was falling asleep in Jesus at the age of about 59, in the beautiful valley of Manoa, just before the dawn of June 5, 1832, fully trusting her Saviour, she repeated the following lines of a valued Hawaiian hymn:

"Eia no au, e Iesu, e,
E nana olupo mai ia'u.
(Lo, here am I, O Jesus
Grant me thy gracious smile.)

PICTURE CANE HAD $10 STRING ATTACHED

AN EASTERN YOUTH WANTS TO STUDY LAW WITH GOVERNOR. SECRETARY HAWES' WORK.

Private Secretary Alexander G. Hawes was discovered in the outer office of the gubernatorial chamber yesterday afternoon busy with shears, paste and a large figured calendar.

The genial protector of the privacy of the chief territorial executive was cutting out dates.

A casual observer might have thought Mr. Hawes was just amusing himself, but a weightier motive inspired the action of His Excellency's writer.

Seated between a big safe and a bigger table, surrounded by piles of copy-books containing copies of thousands of letters signed by Governor Dole, and piles of books holding letters received by the executive from all parts of the world, Secretary Hawes dallied with a half-dollar bottle of scented paste and a dangerous looking pair of shears.

Through the open transom over the closed door leading to the sanctum sanctorum, the occasional even tones of the Governor's voice and the less modulated speech of J. T. McCrossin, talking Kohala ditch, kept accompaniment with the snip-snap of the Secretary's scissors.

Mr. Hawes kindly explained that he was pasting numbers on the letter-books, perfecting a system of reference to the mass of correspondence handled by the office in the last few years.

"I suppose the Governor gets some queer letters among so much correspondence," ventured a scribe, watching Hawes and the vivisection calendar admiringly.

"Yes, he does," replied the scissors man, generously, then, brightening perceptibly, he added, "A. C. Gehr's Kohala ditch letters, for example." The shears shook with their holder's chuckling emotion.

"And the lost letters in the matter of the three soldier boys who burglarized Chief Justice Frear's Tantalus home?" weekly suggested the scribe.

The Secretary looked hurt, pasted three numbers on as many books in alliance, then smiled winningly.

"Yes, the Governor receives some odd communications sometimes," said the Private Secretary. "Of course lots of them require but little in the way of answer, but all must be answered. It was not so long ago that the Governor nor received a handsomely embellished walking-attack made by a convict in Oregon state prison. The attack was accompanied by a letter stating that the article was a present to the Governor of Hawaii. All down and around the cane were pictures of Admiral Dewey and the battle of Manila. It was really a well executed piece of work."

"By the next mail came a letter from Mr. Convict asking for ten dollars. The cane was evidently not a gift. The Governor had no idea of encouraging this sort of thing and I replied, offering to return the attack. The Oregon convict again wrote offering to sell the stick for one dollar, saying that if the Governor did not want to buy it, he would esteem it a favor if I would sell it elsewhere and forward the money. I expressed the stick back to its sender at an expense of some seventy-five cents. I suppose a dozen letters passed over that patriotic pictorial cane."

"All the time." "Does he grant the favor?" "I keep a little stock of the Governor's autographs written on the back of his regular visiting card and usually slip one in an envelope and send it to the applicant without comment." "How about requests for photographs?" "Get lots of them. Always refer applicants to some photographer who has them in stock. Of course if the applicant be a newspaper or magazine the accommodation is in order." "Many folks job hunting?" "Innumerable. A young man wrote from the East the other day saying he understood the Governor would resume practice as an attorney-at-law upon the expiration of his term as Governor, begging to be allowed a chance to study law in the Governor's firm, should he establish one. I was instructed by the Governor to inform the youth that the Governor's plans for the future were unsettled and that, in any event, an inexperienced man in a law office would not be altogether desirable, unless, perhaps, he should be a stenographer and typewriter. Similar applications are constantly received. And then the Governor gets all imaginable kinds of letters asking information about Hawaii, its lands, laws, climate, inhabitants, agriculture, business, opportunities, and so forth. These applicants are respectfully referred to the heads of the departments most likely to have the desired information. Sometimes, of course, this office secures and transmits the information."

To Sick Ones I WILL SEND YOU HELP IF YOU'LL ASK IT.

Send no money—just a postal, stating which book I shall send. Simply write me—as thousands do every week—to tell me that you need help. Then I will do this—I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and I will leave the decision to you.

I do that to convince you—to prove my faith in myself. I have perfected a remedy so unusual—so nearly certain—that I want all who need it to have it. I have made my offer so fair that no doubt or prejudice can deter any sick one from accepting it. In the past 12 years I have furnished my Restorative to over half a million patients, on trial. My records show that 39 out of each 40 have paid for it gladly, because they were cured. The rest had the month's test free.

My Restorative is the result of a lifetime's work, in learning how to strengthen the inside nerves. It is the only remedy that can bring back the nerve power which operates the vital organs. A weak organ means weak nerve power. It simply lacks the strength to do its duty. It is like a weak engine, that only needs more steam.

With the old way we doctored the organ itself, and the results at best were but temporary. The results of my Restorative are permanent, and they are absolutely certain, save where some cause like cancer makes a cure impossible.

With this remedy I have cured cases as difficult as physicians ever meet; and I have rarely found a chronic case that could be really cured without it.

My book will tell you why. If you don't need it, please tell me one who does.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is sold by all druggists.

The man at Chetoo is still playing the war game at the same old stand.

When politicians fail to influence juries by threats, they try cajoling and lay the blame all on the judge.

After so many years in Hawaii, may not the Gilbertese find that, after all, "the old home ain't what it used to be?"

His Satanic Majesty would find it a wall a Paradise on earth if the morning paper's ideas of justice prevailed in the Territorial courts.

Mokuawooee is producing an exhibition that makes the expense of travel infinitesimal when gauged by the reward awaiting the visitor.

As the Republican candidates progress in their swing around the circle, the element of doubt in the county election rapidly gives way to assurance of success.

"The Bulletin—which plainly fears, if investigations get to be the rule, that something will come out about printing grafts."—Advertiser.

Now isn't that terrible?

Now that the Chamber of Commerce is no longer obliged to waste time hunting up a quorum, the opportunity offers the trustees to drive measures of general business and public interest at top-notch speed.

THE MEAT IN THE COCOANUT.

Not less ancient than the endeavor to influence juries by wholesale condemnation, biased criticism and contumely is the old, old, centuries old, scheme of raising a dust as a counter attraction to shift responsibility from official shoulders.

Having ever been the chief exponent of the former, the public is not surprised, in fact is considerably amused that the morning paper should fall so naturally into the second channel of ancient though hardly honorable, political shell-game players. As usual, the hysterical effort is accompanied by voluminous assertion of the organ's deep interest in the advancement of justice and the promotion of virtue.

The expression "Now the Advertiser has no desire or intent to judge the court or the present grand jury with bias, prejudice or contumely" reads as smoothly as the babbling innocence that ripples from the mouths of babies. To citizens who never read the morning paper—and they are numerous—it rings like a clarion of justice. Unfortunately the progress of its campaign to discredit Territorial courts and Territorial juries does not uphold the statement. The records of the courts—even of the majority Supreme Court—point diametrically in the opposite direction, should there arise an element of doubt in determining the desire and intent of the Advertiser.

We are informed that the fault for failure of the Territorial grand jury to investigate alleged legislative shortcomings is with the judge of the court; that the last previous grand jury didn't have time to look up legislative matters—though charges of corruption were flying thick and fast at the time; that the Territorial Attorney General had no "encouragement" in the short verbal charge from the court at its present session. In its previous issue the same paper said "the community had nothing to hope from the Territorial grand jury" in the way of investigating legislative scandals. Now it is the judge with the jury, whom the paper has "no desire or intent to judge with bias, prejudice or contumely." In two separate issues it attacks each.

The only officer of the Territorial court who wears a postchance crown is the Attorney General but he can't put it on because he has no "encouragement" from the court. Yet this Attorney General sat many long minutes in a vacant box to listen to the unfolding of a tale by a poor devil of a Chairman on an impossible financial proposition. Had he encouragement in this matter? Does the Attorney General require detailed instructions from the court as to what matters he as prosecuting officer of the Territory shall bring before the grand jury?

Going over to the Federal Court do we find that the United States District Attorney required instructions from the court in its charge that he should investigate the missing voucher problem? Did the judge in his charge call special attention to this subject? The situation was identically the same as for as any special reference to the vouchers in the court charge is concerned. Matters to be brought before the grand jury were in the hands of the Government prosecuting officer. The Federal Attorney acted. The Territorial Attorney passed.

Kohala Water Gehr has suggested that the Territorial court's reference to no special circumstance applied to his demand for an investigation of charges made regarding his dealings with Territorial officials. The morning paper says it was directed at legislative vouchers. In either case, Kohala water or vouchers, it was up to the Attorney General.

Manifestly the last previous grand jury, presided over by the presiding elder of the morning paper, could not investigate the matter of vouchers, but if statements made by the paper over which the presiding elder presides were true, missing vouchers were the least of the sins to be laid at legislators' doors. The legislators were here. They were not even called.

The upshot of the whole business from the morning paper's standpoint, is the use of the action of the Federal officers to further the paper's assiduous campaign to discredit the Territorial court and the Territorial juries. It discovers that its responsive Attorney General is a responsible factor in the game, and straightway charges that any man asking why he has not acted in this legislative matter is seeking to discredit the Federal court. This charge is extremely silly, and none will appreciate it better than the Federal officers, the Federal jury—and the morning press.

Yet at the Territorial court and Territorial jury. "The Advertiser has no desire or intent to judge with bias, prejudice or contumely." This is the jury from which the community had "nothing to hope"; the judge whom the Advertiser has vilified in season and out.

Examine the community while it snails.

HEALTHY WOMEN

Praise Pe-ru-na as a Cure for Colds and a Preventive of Catarrh.

MRS. M. J. BRINK FIRST STAGE OF CATARRH. A Serious Mistake Which Thousands Are Making.

The first stage of catarrh is what is commonly known as "catching cold." It may be in the head, nose, throat or lungs. Its beginning is sometimes so severe as to cause a chill and considerable fever, or it may be so slight as to not hinder a person from his usual business. In perhaps a majority of cases little or no attention is paid to the first stage of catarrh, and hence it is that nearly one-half of the people have chronic catarrh in some form.

To neglect a cold is to invite chronic catarrh. As soon as any one discovers the first symptoms of catching cold he should at once begin the use of Peruna.

For special directions everyone should read "The Ills of Life," a copy of which surrounds each bottle. Peruna is for sale by all chemists and druggists at one dollar per bottle or six bottles for five dollars.

according to directions on the bottle, and the cold is sure to pass away without leaving any bad effects. Unless this is done the cold is almost sure to end in the second stage of catarrh, which is making so many lives miserable. If Peruna was taken every time one has a cold or cough, chronic catarrh would be practically an unknown disease.

Miss Elizabeth Uber, No. 57 Bussell street, Albany, N. Y., writes: "I have always dreaded unsettled weather because of my extreme liability to catch cold, when a catarrhal trouble would quickly develop through my entire system, which it would take weeks to drive away. I am thankful to say that since I have taken PERUNA I do not have any reason to dread this anymore. If I have been at all exposed to the damp, wet or cold weather, I take a dose or two of PERUNA, and it throws out any hint of sickness from my system."—Miss Elizabeth Uber.

Mrs. M. J. Brink, No. 823 Michigan avenue, St. Joseph, Mo., writes: "This past winter during the wet and cold weather I caught a sudden and severe cold, which developed a catarrhal condition through my entire system, and affected my general health that I was completely broken down, and became nervous and hysterical and unfit to supervise my home. My physician prescribed for me but somehow his medicine did me no good. Reading of PERUNA I decided to try it. After I had taken but three bottles I found myself in fine health."—Mrs. M. J. Brink.

Sybil A. Hadley, 20 Main street, Huntington, Ind., writes: "Last winter after getting my feet wet I began to cough, which gradually grew worse until my throat was sore and raw. Ordinary remedies did not help me and cough remedies nauseated me. Reading an advertisement of what PERUNA could do, I decided to try a bottle, and you can imagine how glad I felt when it began to relieve me in a very short time. In less than two weeks I was completely cured."—Sybil A. Hadley.

Miss Sara McGahan, No. 197 3d street, Albany, N. Y., writes: "A few months ago I suffered with a severe attack of influenza, which nothing seemed to relieve. My hearing became bad, my eyes became irritated and feverish. Nothing seemed right and nothing I ate tasted good. I took PERUNA and within two weeks I was perfectly well."—Sara McGahan.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be glad to give you his valuable advice gratis. Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday the committee appointed to consider the matter of supplying coal to the transports made a report showing that six companies in Honolulu had made a tender for supplying the coal which seemed to be satisfactory to the War Department. The report was adopted.

The Chamber registered a vote of thanks to C. S. District Attorney Breckons for his assistance in the preparation of the report of the committee on coffee.

The by-laws of the Chamber were adopted as a whole and the old by-laws were repealed.

The newly adopted by-laws required the election of nine men who with the president, vice-president and secretary and treasurer will constitute the Board of Trustees of the Chamber. The following were unanimously elected: C. L. Wight, E. I. Spalding, J. A. Kennedy, H. M. von Holt, J. M. Dowsett, J. P. Cooke, C. Hedemann, F. M. Swanzy and J. F. Morgan.

HAWAIIAN LABOR PROBLEM.

Ed. Rosenberg, for many years Secretary of the San Francisco Labor Council, returned last Monday from his trip to the Philippines and the Hawaiian Islands. It will be remembered that Mr. Rosenberg was commissioned by the American Federation of Labor to investigate labor conditions in our insular possessions, and this he has done most thoroughly. He is now engaged in preparing his report to the A. F. of L., and the document will be an exhaustive presentation of the labor problems existing in the Philippines and the Hawaiian Territory.—Labor Clarion (S. F.) October 2.

Jury returned verdict for plaintiff in action to quiet title of Margaret Cullen vs. T. F. Lansing, involving about half an acre at Kaneohe, this island.

"Good Lord!" he gasped. "You don't mean it?"
Kendall nodded. Then he sat down and rested his head on his hands for a few seconds, while Elmendorf gathered breath and heart for the next question.
"What was in the jar—milk?"
"No," replied Kendall. "It is a kind of liquid food preparation. The basis of it is milk; but, unfortunately," he added, looking up at the detective, "it will keep."
"Been in the room several days, you mean?" said Elmendorf. "If it was ordinary milk that had been dozed, we could narrow it down to a few hours. But this stuff—why, absolutely everybody connected with the case has had a chance at it."
"How shall I tell her?" muttered Kendall.
"Her?"
The doctor gave a nervous start.
"Miss MacLane," he said. "This will be a hard story for her to hear."
"You are right," replied Elmendorf, "after all the care she's taken, the devotion she's shown to that poor child, who was nothing to her—worse than nothing, in fact—an enemy, you might say."
"Now, look here"—exclaimed Kendall hoarsely as he got upon his feet. "No, no!" cried Elmendorf. "I don't mean to accuse her. That would be absurd. We mustn't waste time. What was the poison?"
"I don't know," replied Kendall. "Of course there was no time for analysis. That's why I tried it on these small animals. It's some kind of a heart depressant—the very thing to use in a case of this kind, where the condition is one of weakness and especially where there is an injury in the region of the organ."
"But didn't these mice show any symptoms that you could recognize?" asked Elmendorf.
"No; nothing definite. I could name several poisons that would answer all the requirements. It isn't necessary to know immediately. The treatment would be the same in any case. And the danger is over, I believe."
"Unless it's somewhere else," said Elmendorf; "in her medicines, perhaps."
"That wouldn't be possible without assuming something that can't be assumed—not in my presence, at any rate."
"You mean that Miss MacLane?"
"Precisely," said Kendall. "And as there can be no thought of such a thing we conclude that this infernal thing—and he tapped the jar with his knuckles—"which was handy for everybody, wide mouthed and all that—Oh, I have been an idiot!"
"She's been having this right along,"

ELSIE PERPETRATES A JEST.

"They say," remarked Elsie, "that people always feel particularly well just before they die. Do you remember Bernhardt in 'Camille,' the very last words before she dies in Armand's arms: 'I shall live! Ah, how well I feel! And how I cried when she said that! And then Gaston says, 'She sleeps. Isn't that a lovely scene?'"
"As it came to your mind at this moment," said Brenda, "I joyfully infer that you are feeling very much better."
"You must think I am silly to talk so much about dying," said Elsie. "I am soggy with sentimentality."
"You have mentioned it on just four occasions," said Brenda, "including this, but it seems often to us because we don't wish to lose you and to yourself because really and truly you don't wish to die. On the whole, you have been as cheerful as any girl could possibly be under the circumstances, and as for your sentimentality, my dear, I'd give the world to have some of it myself."
"I was going to say," continued Elsie, "that my motive for continually harping on it is that you may know I am not afraid, and afterward you may tell Mr. Alden."
"This exchange of pleasantries upon a cheerful subject occurred during the time when Kendall was experimenting with the white mice."
"I must have been pretty near it the last time," said Elsie. "It was double, I scarcely knew what was the matter when it began, even though I'd fainted such a little while before. It was like drifting, drifting away. You are surprised. You think you must stop, and before you really have time to be frightened you are gone. But I waked just for a second—just long enough to haven't any more than a blade of grass, but I'm gaining on it. If I live another week, I shall die to go to Daniel Frohman's No. 1 company instead of to heaven. I'd rather."

"Do I speak like that when I address Dr. Kendall?" said Brenda, with a slight access of color. "Well, it may be so. You are very clever, my dear."
"This is the way you hold your arms when you walk," said Elsie. "Isn't that pretty? Of course I can't do it very well lying down, but see the fingers and the ease of the wrist. Were you taught to do that?"
"I used to have a governess who was crazy on Delarte," replied Brenda. "But she presently went crazy on all other subjects also, and we had to send the poor thing to an institution. I was not aware of my debt to her."
"You owe her a great deal," said Elsie. "I wish I'd had a lunatic of that kind in my family. I couldn't afford to have much teaching. Of course I had some, but when I found what my mother was enduring in order to pay for it—well, I took an engagement with the first thing that came along. And it was a barnstorming crew! We gave six plays a week, and I had to learn a long part in every one of them. The second Monday, in the afternoon, the leading lady came into my room and found me huddled up on the floor in the corner gibbering—just gibbering, that was all—words out of all the plays, as she told me afterward, all jumbled together, and I was cross-eyed with sitting up all night studying under little flickering gas jets. Yes, that's the way she found me, and the room was as cold as a barn too. I had the bed quilt wrapped around by shoulders and my arm through a hole in it.

"The leading lady yelled to the juvenile man, and he really was juvenile—about 18, as I remember. She said, 'Go get a glass of brandy!' The juvenile man went down to the bar and came back with a tumbler solid full. He had to carry it carefully in order to keep from spilling any. The leading lady was a temperance woman. She never touched a drop of wine, and, in fact, she was a regular straitlaced New England pilgrim, but somebody had told her once that brandy was good for the thing that I had—'white brain.' We call it. The juvenile man didn't know how much brandy a person ought to take, and I—well, I didn't

ENGLAND LEADERS WRESTLING WITH GREAT FISCAL PROBLEM

EARL ROSEBERY.

The question of the hour in England and throughout the British Empire is the fiscal proposition of Colonial Secretary Joseph Chamberlain to abandon England's long-cherished free-trade policy.

London, Oct. 1.—Mr. Chamberlain contributes to the Daily Telegraph this morning a letter which is intended to serve as a preface to the re-publication in book form of a series of articles which has appeared in the Daily Telegraph on the fiscal problem.

The letter, however, is practically a complete exposition of his proposed policy.

Mr. Chamberlain says: "It is not well with British trade. After a long period of success, the policy of unrestricted foreign imports has now shown evident signs of failure."

Our exports are stationary in amount and declining in character. We receive from our competitors a larger proportion of manufactured goods and we send them a larger proportion of raw materials than we used to. Our supremacy in what have always been considered our standard industries has been wrested from us or is seriously menaced.

One by one our markets are closed to us by hostile tariffs. We have lost all power of bargaining successfully for the removal or rejection of these barriers to our trade. Our colonies alone continue to increase their purchases, and even here we must abandon all hope of expansion, and we are threatened with the loss of our existing trade if we are unable to meet their requests for reciprocal preference.

Our competition, which is already so acute, is not fair competition. It is supported by bounties, fostered by the operations of trusts and strengthened by the economical advantages which our opponents enjoy in the matter of cheaper labor and in the absence of all those regulations which we have assented to in the interest of the working classes and in order to raise their standard of living.

Our duty is to meet the danger in the future is not a rise in prices owing to taxation, but a failure in the supply due to natural causes such as drought, or to artificial combinations such as the Leiter corner. This danger is greatest when the sources of supply are few and tend themselves to monopoly, while the policy that develops new markets and increases the food-producing areas of the world will tend to cheapness, and, above all, the stability of price.

AN OPEN LATER. Protection! If the party with an automobile, who nearly run us down on the ball grounds as the crowd was leaving, ever repeats the act, unless I am totally disabled, he will need the ambulance to finish his trip. This is not intended as a threat, but simply a matter of business. People not possessing one of these devilish machines do not have to get off the earth, I don't think.—A. W. Townsend, Livonia, in Livonia (N. Y.) Gazette.

Why The Demijohn And Its Many Use

Why do we call a big wicker wine cask or beer "demijohn"? That name naturally suggests "half-John" or "John half-full" or somebody or something directly or indirectly connected with some "John" and liquor. But demijohns are used for holding all sorts of liquors—not necessarily intoxicants by any means.

The origin of the word is a trifle cloudy. We get it from the French "demijohnne," which signifies a "demijohn." Just as in our language. And that word appears to have been originally a corruption of an "accommodation," so called of "Dunne Jeanne" or Lady Jane—or else to have come into the French tongue directly from the Arabic "damagan" in demijohn, said to be so called from Damagan, a town in northern Persia, once famous for its glass works, and to have been the spot where glass jugs enclosed in wickerwork were originally made.

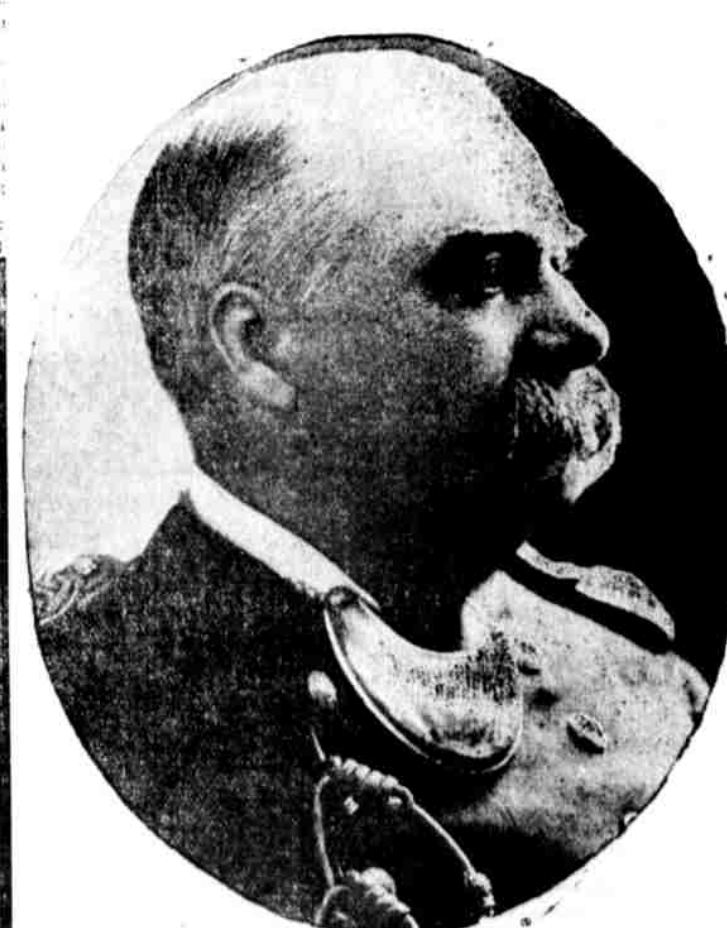

So much for the name. The demijohns themselves are a most important article in the liquor, oil, spirits and paint trades, not to mention other branches generally not so well known. We frequently see numerous vessels of this sort standing in front of liquor stores. But they are, of course, signs or else advertisements, pure and simple. On them the wicker case is woven over a bottle-shaped or jug-shaped form of wood.

From a dealer in glassware it was learned by a New York reporter the other day that the largest demijohn made regularly for the trade has a capacity of only five gallons. The smaller holds only one and a half ounces, or less than a gill. That size is used chiefly for perfume and cordials.

Between the five-gallon and the gill size, this dealer explained, "demijohns" are made in many sizes, including quart, pint and half pint. In these smaller demijohns there is a considerable holding trade. Demijohns are not very costly, anyway, but the very smallest are the most expensive proportionately. A gill demijohn sells for more than one that will hold

"The Penalties of Taste and Other Essays." By Norman Bridge, M. D. 587 1/2 Ins. Clo. Herbert S. Stone & Co., Chicago. $1.25. From the Author.

Dr. Bridge, formerly professor of Medicine in Rush Medical College, Chicago, but now of Los Angeles, is a writer to be classed with Weir Mitchell, Holmes, Lindley and Prudden. He is thoughtful and, of choice, takes up subjects that demand thought, but he is practical as well, and his kindly philosophy bears upon every day matters.

"The purpose of knowledge is to increase the life and comfort of man," he says. "We seem to seek knowledge for its own sake, but we do not.—The ulterior aim is the mental happiness as well as the physical comfort of the race, and especially of the individual." Then a little less didactically, perhaps, Dr. Bridge goes on to speak of taste in general, fashion, art, criticism to the end of the chapter that gives its name to the book.

"Two Kinds of Conscience" is full of interest and information. "Bashfulness" and "Our Poorly Educated Educators" may be read and reread to advantage. In "Nerves of a Child" the author touches upon the duties of parents to children, points out faults in our system of education, and with unusual insight traces out the evolution of traits and characteristics.

He shows us that what we imagine is genius or extraordinary talent, may be only one-sided development, and makes us ashamed of ourselves for judging harshly of tendencies and emotions which are not bad at all, but only outgrowths of heredity or the results of our example. It is a well known fact that those who have no children know the most about bringing them up properly. Old maids and bachelors are proverbially uncharitable towards children. And another fact that makes itself plain is the blindness of parents to the faults of their own children, but the ready discernment by the same parents of the mistakes of other people's children.

Perhaps this is a wise provision in order that the poor boys and girls may not grow up pampered by their fond fathers and mothers, for there are enough neighbors not to say anything of aunts and uncles to defend the country against its juvenile members. There are howls and scowls and objections enough, the Lord knows, to keep down our happy, restless spirits.

Dr. Bridge speaks very sensibly of the methods of "bringing up" children; of forcing them to be this or that according to a rigid standard of their own preconception. Instead of watching then adding the growth of an individual child up into the work he can do well. Perhaps a majority of those who have children ought not to have them, at least to train. They start out with preconceived notions, say with Puritanical fervor—"Spare the rod and spoil the child"—then forthwith spoil the child by using the rod without judgment. Unfortunately the ability to have children and the judgment to train them do not always go together. And many who are blessed with numerous children haven't enough brains to bring them up. I heard a very intelligent minister who did not have any children until he was fifty say in the pulpit that the quality of parental love was relentless—think of it! He spoke of the Prodigal son and praised the father who waited until the son came to him but who would not call him back though the son perished. To my mind this was pride, and not very commendable quality, and one that has caused more misery and heartbreak in families than any other trait. It is not force of character that makes a man ready to punish, to whip a boy, Stern, rigid, exacting parents may be very weak indeed, and they generally are. It is the strong, forceful character that is kind, considerate, charitable; who takes into consideration the period of youth, who sees both sides of an off-hand matter, who remembers that much of what we call "badness" is not so much that as impulse and thoughtlessness; the disintegration of a temperament; the process of getting character.

We have outgrown our idea that men should be whipped for their offenses, because we found that such treatment did not mend matters, and yet these offenses are done wilfully in adult life when the nature of right and wrong is known. The child in nearly every instance, does not do wrong wilfully or even knowingly; his motive is good though mistaken; his mischief, naughtiness, lying, disobedience, are based upon a childish conviction which needs to be dislodged in a reasonable way. Most intelligent men have learned that beating a balky horse is worse than useless, yet they will beat a child who refuses to do a thing because he holds (in his mind a good) reason for not doing it, so all children of any force whatever are at times "hard to bring up." Dr. Bridge says: "One cardinal truth we usually forget, namely, that a human being from infancy to full adult age often passes through several phases of character and conduct that are as diverse as saints and sinners, that are directly and always hereditary, and yet that are to most minds utterly inexplicable on such grounds. The confusion comes of supposing that every individual is either good or bad, or once bad is always so, and once good must so remain—instead of the truth that all good people have some faults, and every very bad people have some good in them; or of supposing that every individual through life lives in one and the same moral groove. A boy may be a proper subject for the penitentiary, if not for the asylum, and the rounded manhood of the same individual be fit to canonize; or the reverse may be the case. For example take the outlandish conduct of some children of good people. The boys are rowdies, bandits and thieves; they are abusive to everybody at times, and wholly unmanageable; into all manner of mischief, and always aping the boys that are most worthless and reckless. They are barbarians, and show how most of us have not advanced much. Girls sometimes in their sphere and circle, exhibit traits that prove they are of the same race as boys. One peculiar trait is that of palming off their fiction as truth, and a trait of many of both sexes is marked cruelty to the lower animals, and often to other children.—Let any children happen to carry these traits into adult life, and they are socially ruined. That they do not usually carry them through life is because it is a part of the evolution of their natures, their hereditary tendency to change with each half decade up to full adult responsibility, and they mostly arrive at their period with those motives and impulses in control of them that make decent members of the community.

People often wonder how a certain incorrigible boy could be born to such superbly balanced parents as he has; and declare that there must be some hitch in the heredity, or that this is a case where heredity failed to work. Neither is the case. There is seventy-five per cent of certainty that his parents, one or both of them, passed through the identical moral phase at the same time of life, and some day his neighbors may wonder how so exemplary citizen as he will become, could ever have such hoodlums of boys as his sons, in spite of their mother, will perhaps be. And do you think any amount of training would change this order of things and made the fifteenth year trait appear at the tenth? Did you ever see training avail in such cases? True it is that boys improve while the training is going on, but we ought to be fair to the evolutionary changes, and not attribute their results to the drill.

It is the birth of a wholesale self-consciousness, and the passing out of the period of carelessness and rebellion against advice and refinement into one of normal self respect, that produces the change in most of these boys.—Much of the training bestowed on unbecoming and wayward children is useless, and some of it both unnecessary and mischievous.—During the clown period your boy may not keep his room in order, nor turn down the bed-clothes when he gets up in the morning, nor behave himself in a polite manner in company or at table.—What is the use of wanting your energy over these things when he will normally evolve himself out of his loathsomeness, and that quickly, as the years fly?

Your girl may romance to you with a sober face, and build all manner of fiction for you.—But almost as sure as the sun, her development will in a few years bring her a spirit of true honesty and purity that will give you comfort to your dying day.

The best training for children is manifestly that of the gentle sort.—The greatest power over a child is possible only when he believes you understand him and have some sympathy with his soul.

The old idea of a parent's attitude towards his children has grown out of the old theology of a relentless God anxious to punish by hell-fire children who have done the best they knew how. If the Father who is better than any human father could be, uses so little reason in his judgments, why should not poor man when he is given a "little brief authority" over his own servants, take out his fits of temper on their backs. This is easier than studying psychology, and more in accordance with a sort of parental dignity.

"The Harkriders." By Opie Read. Clo: 5 1/2 x 7 1/2. Chicago. Ills. 353 pp. Laird & Lee, Chicago. $1.50.

Typographically well done, the book will be enjoyed by those who like Opie Read's novels, and such readers are numerous. The story begins with the affairs of John Harkrider as he returns to his deserted home at the close of the Civil War in which he fought on the Confederate side. He marries in "blue jeans" a girl in "calico," and they start out in life in good spirits. To their home comes very often a cousin, Major Luke Harkrider, who with "Colonel" John, talks over war experiences. By and by when a daughter is born to the Colonel, Luke says that he will "wait for" her, which he does. In the meantime, many negro and po' white trash characters are introduced with some good dialect, Calie and Slab, two servants, being the chief exponents. Slab writes "po'try" and for this reason is unduly held in contempt.

When Augusta Thompson a friend's daughter is left in the care of the Colonel by a will providing that the girl be kept ignorant of the fortune coming to her from her father, she comes to live with her guardian's brother, the Colonel, and here Beverly Harkrider, a nephew, renews his love for the protegee.

Augusta is supposed to have a "voice" which she wishes to cultivate, but the will provides that she shall not do so.

Simms, a villain who has discovered that Augusta is an heiress, tries to win her love, so upon this hinges the plot of the story. What they all said and did is unfolded in due course to the patient reader, who may be assured at the start that all comes out as it ought at the end of the last chapter.

Some of the conversations are witty, and many of the observations of Slab are well founded.

Troubles In Spreckels Family Much Regretted By Friends

San Francisco Town Talk says of the suit of Mrs. Watson against her father, Claus Spreckels:

It has been said that the whirlwind of time removes prejudice and passions. Perhaps it does, but not when they are as deep-rooted as those that are responsible for the stern and uncompromising attitude of Claus Spreckels toward those members of his family who had the temerity to ignore his mandates. There is something reminiscent of the harshness of parental rule that prevailed in mediaeval times in the conduct of Claus Spreckels towards those members of his family who have incurred what appears to be his irreconcilable displeasure. It never occurs to the picturesque and sublimely stubborn old gentleman that in his tilt with his offspring he is encountering qualities so like his own that he must have been responsible for them. He has the courage of his convictions more strongly developed than any other man in San Francisco. He is a most tenacious enemy, but he is also a noble and self-sacrificing friend. Unfortunately his most bitter prejudices have been directed against his own children, and as a consequence the family skeleton has been frequently dangled in the light of day. And owing to the prominence and wealth of the family, and the important part it has played in the development of this city and state, its jars and eruptions have excited more public interest than is usually caused by a domestic scandal.

The spectacle of a family divided against itself is always a pathetic one, and when the leading members of such a family have endeavored to themselves to a community by repeated acts of generosity, and by many evidences of civic pride there is always an earnest hope that harmony will some day be restored. But the possibility of a reconciliation between Claus Spreckels and his repudiated children appears to be more remote every day. The latest reminder that the fires of the family discord are still burning, comes in a dispatch from Honolulu concerning the suit instituted by Mrs. Thomas Watson, only daughter of Claus Spreckels, against her father for the recovery of a block of Honolulu property valued at four hundred thousand dollars.

Shortly after her marriage, Mrs. Watson conveyed to her father the property which he had given to her. The supposition was that she took this action at the instigation of her husband, it having been said that he married her for her money. Later on she changed her mind and sued for its recovery on the technical ground that the deed was invalid because it did not bear her husband's signature.

Now comes the most startling of all the unpleasant features of the bitter controversy. The only way that Spreckels's attorney can defeat the suit is to show that Mrs. Watson had no husband at the time she executed that deed. And so they allege that Mr. and Mrs. Watson are not man and wife; that Mr. Watson was never legally divorced from his first wife, and that consequently the marriage with Miss Spreckels is void. The gravity of this charge is apparent. It is one of the most remarkable ever made by a father in a court of justice. Indeed I should prefer to believe that it was made by Mr. Spreckels's attorneys without his knowledge or consent.

The marriage of Emma Spreckels and Thomas Watson was a pure love match. She was very much younger than the staid business man who won her heart, but she found in him the ideal of her dreams and gave up a fortune that she might be happy with the man of her choice. It was in the nature of an elopement, and was a great shock to Mr. Spreckels, who had frequently entertained Mr. Watson at his home as a friend, and who believed that the latter had taken an unfair advantage of his hospitality. Indeed, it was said at the time that he had intended his daughter for another, and I believe that Sam Sherbridge was then regarded as a promising suitor for the hand of the heiress. The Watsons traveled about for a long time after their romantic marriage and finally settled in England, where they bought a country place. Not less bitter than his feelings toward his daughter are the prejudices of Claus Spreckels against his sons, Gus and Rudolph. Ten years ago C. Augustus Spreckels and H. M. Woolley brought suit against Claus, J. D. and Adolph B. Spreckels and other directors of the Hawaiian Sugar Company, charging that defendants were defrauding plaintiffs of a large sum of money. A sensational trial was expected, but before the case came into court a secret agreement of compromise was entered into. The terms were carefully withheld from the public, and would have always no doubt have remained a secret had not Rudolph Spreckels brought suit a long time later to prevent the transfer of stock given by him as collateral security for his brother Gus, from the Nevada Bank to Honolulu, in order that it might be placed in the bank's name. Judge Hebbard granted him an injunction and Delmas and Shortridge moved to set it aside. Then the agreement became public property. It showed that the old gentleman had made a complete settlement with his son. Many stories have been told regarding the cause of the estrangement of the father and his sons Gus and Rudolph. But nothing authentic has ever been learned, because the members of the family never discuss their affairs. It has been said that the wives of the sons were, in a measure responsible, but probably the correct version is that it arose through a disagreement over financial matters. It is related that the sons once refused to return to their father a large sum of money he had given them, when he needed it to fight the sugar trust. And it is said that he was never very bitter against them until their attorneys questioned his honesty in one of the suits in which they were involved.

As a consequence of the alienation of affections in the Spreckels family the palatial home of the parents in Van Ness avenue is a very lonesome place. It is a large family, three of the sons and one daughter being married, and several grandchildren having come into the world, but only a small section of it has the entire to the big brownstone house in Van Ness avenue. J. D. Spreckels and his brother Adolph have retained the confidence and love of their parents, and their business interests are entwined with his, but there is no cordiality between them and their brothers or the families of any of them, though I believe the cousins, who are granddaughters of Claus Spreckels, have recently bowed politely at social functions. Who can predict a small fraction of the complications destined to ensue when the estate of Claus Spreckels is ripe for administration in the probate court?

By the way, I hear that Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Spreckels, whom many people consider the handsomest couple in San Francisco, contemplate entertaining on a lavish scale next season at their country place, which is one of the most beautiful in California. Among the features of the place now being prepared are a race-track and a polo field. They expect to have many of the summer sports at their home, and if so, they will be very much sought after. I hear that the J. D. Spreckels's old home at Howard and Twenty-first streets is for sale. As it is an enormous house on a corner lot two hundred and forty-five by one hundred and twenty-seven feet, with a big garden and stable, it's hard to say when it will find a purchaser. It would take a millionaire to keep it up, and millionaires aren't moving to the Mission nowadays. Probably it may be converted into a family boarding house, or torn down, and flats erected in its stead.

Sir Thomas will not eat his dinners and depart a more experienced man than ever before. Three experiences in cup racing may satisfy him. Still New York is a pleasant city in many ways, and another yacht would be an excuse for visiting again the noble harbor.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

YOU MAY BE CURED

544 Garfield Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL., October 9, 1902.

After doctoring for eleven months and taking forty-three bottles of medicine and finding no relief for leucorrhoea resulting from irritation of a fallen womb I took Wine of Cardui and fourteen bottles cured me. This seems strange but it is the simple truth. Wine of Cardui helped me from the time I began taking it and having heard it praised so highly by friends who had tried it I felt satisfied that it would help me, and it did. It cured me. Took every bit of ache, pain and headache, cramps and dragging down sensations away till I felt young, strong and happy once more. It is a wonderful medicine and a true friend to women. When I look back on the months of torture I had it seems like a hideous nightmare. Wine of Cardui will cure any woman I believe. I have more faith in it than all other medicines combined.
